Haste Asked By President On District Home Rule

Truman Wants Bill Moved by Petition For Floor Action In Lower House

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

President Truman would like to see the District home rule bill brought to the House floor by petition as fast as the two-mail-deliveries-a-day postal bill was.

Mr. Truman's comment was made yesterday at his weekly press conference.

Expressing his continuing support for local self-government for Washingtonians, the President said, in reply to a question, that he would like very much to see the District get home rule. Then he volunteered the comment about the postal bill, adding that he didn't think much of that measure.

The home rule bill, passed over a year ago by the Senate, has been blocked by a hostile majority on the House District Committee. A petition to pry it loose regardless now has 205 of the necessary 218 signatures, its supporters said yesterday. There are five to 10 duplications among the signers, however.

Home rule headquarters, maintained near the Capitol by the various groups backing local suffrage, immediately announced plans to seek support from those who signed the postal bill petition but who haven't yet signed the home rule measure.

A list of these Congressmen already has been made up, it was explained. It shows that 61 House members—36 Republicans and 25 Democrats—who signed the postal petition have yet to sign the home rule petition.

Commenting on the President's latest statement, Culver B. Chamberlain, head of the Central Suffrage Conference, said:

"If members of Congress were prepared to sign the postal bill at this time, certainly they should be prepared to give the vote to the District. This is especially true when District boys for the third time in a generation are fighting for democracy in foreign lands."

The postal bill rolled up the necesary 218 signatures in record time—exactly two weeks. The home-rule petition, lacking the strength of the forces behind the postal measure, has been available to House numbers for signatures since last October 13.

Hurricane Veers To North, Peril To Florida Abates

Miami, Fla., Aug. 17 (U.P.).—A mighty Atlantic hurricane menacing Florida and the Bahamas with 140-mile-an-hour winds has swung to the north-northwest lessening the danger to the mainland, the Miami weather bureau reported tonight.

The bureau's information came from a radar-equipped "seeing eye" Navy plane which flew into the storm area. The news, given in the bureau's 11:30 p.m. EDT advisory, cheered the 750,000 jittery residents of the Florida gold coast who already had set in motion their disaster preparedness

The advisory put the center of the 160-mile hurricane about 400 miles east of Palm Beach, Fla.

"The northward turn lessens the danger to the Bahamas and Florida but shipping is advised to avoid this hurricane," the weather bureau said.

Shimon Aide Says:

Hughes' Wire At D. C. Hotel Was Tapped

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Human nature trapped a lot of crooks for Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon.

But human nature turned against him when he denied Pvt. John McHale a two-week vacation in 1947. Instead of granting the vacation, Shimon put him on wire-tapping work, McHale said.

Yesterday McHale's slow anger, 3 years old, bubbled afresh before the Senate District Committee investigating the charges that Lieut. Shimon tapped the wire of millionaire Howard Hughes and others.

McHale said he listened to the Hughes tap for Shimon and gave notes to Shimon. A few days later, McHale said, he was "all eyes" when he saw Shimon put a $1000 bill into his wallet after a call at the District Attorney's office from a mysterious "stranger."

McHale gave his testimony in the same room where Hughes had

Some Planes Quit Bolling For Andrews

40 Pct. of Pilot Training Moved to Distant Base, House Committee Told

The Air Force has moved 40 percent of the individual pilot training formerly at Bolling to Andrews Air Force Base, Air Force Secretary Thomas K. Finletter reported yesterday.

The figure was made public before the House Rules Committee just before that group approved for floor action the measure to build a new 14-million-dollar civilian airport for the Washington area.

The bill, already passed by the Senate, will come up for House action before the present session ends. Only minor changes were made in the Senate version by the House Interstate Commerce Committee.

Finletter's statement was contained in a letter, part of which was read by Representative Beckworth (D., Tex.) in backing the airport plan. The Air Force Secretary also said that "local flying has been prohibited when weather conditions are less than 2000 feet ceiling with six miles visibility."

No Tactical Planes at Bolling

Beckworth read the statements after Representative Smith (D., Va.) had asked if the committee had done anything to have military planes at Bolling and Anacostia fields, across the Potomac from National Airport, moved out of the city as a security measure.

Smith said it didn't make sense to him to have "military planes congested in a place where all of them would be blown off the map before we can do anything about it" in case of an enemy attack

However, a Bolling spokesman said later that there now are no tactical aircraft at that Air Force base. About 100 training planes and some administrative planes are stationed there. The move of 40 percent of the training planes began long before the Korean war started. Much of the impetus for the move resulted from the disastrous Eastern Air Lines crash at National in which 55 persons were killed last November 1, when a Bolivian pilot in a military plane rammed a transport.

The Bolling spokesman said the

Truman Calls Wherry Blast Contemptible

Attack on Acheson Draws Angry Retort; President Still for Delaying UMT Bill

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman used the word "contemptible" yesterday in describing an attack by Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.), on Secretary of State Acheson.

Wherry, the Republican floor leader, went after Acheson in a debate Wednesday and said of him: "The blood of our boys in Korea is on his shoulders, and no one else."

Asked to comment on this at a news conference, Mr. Truman bristled and said:

"I think it is a contemptible statement and beneath comment."

He told reporters they could quote him "verbatim."

Senator Wherry struck back at Mr. Truman later by saying that his "failure to remove Acheson, after repudiating his stupid foreign policies, is contemptible." The Nebraskan repeated his demand that Mr. Truman "appoint as Secretary of State someone in whom the American people have confidence."

Puts UMT on Shelf

Ordinarily, the President is restrained in talking about his former colleagues in the Senate. But he appeared to be ready yesterday for the question about Wherry. His vigorous reply reminded oldtimers of the late President Roosevelt's comment on former Senator Burton K. Wheeler's statement in 1941 that the Lend-Lease Act would result in "plowing under every fourth American child." FDR said it was "the rottenest thing that has been said in public life in my generation."

Mr. Truman, replying to questions yesterday about a universal military training bill, said he didn't see any sense in cluttering up Congress with controversial matters when it is already so cluttered up.

That appeared to put universal military training on the shelf for this session of Congress.

The Chief Executive, asked if he had any plans for a political speech on Labor Day, said he had canceled all speaking engagements. He said he was very busy at his White House desk—all day and far into the night.

No Comment on GOP Blast

Before the question about Wherry, Mr. Truman declined to comment on the statement issued by the Republican members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, charging that the Administration gave Russia "a green light to grab whatever it could in China, Korea and Formosa."

Mr. Truman did say he was very much interested in the bipartisan foreign policy, and hoped it would be continued as in the past.

A cloud of confusion has enwrapped universal military training since the project was revived last week.

Yesterday, in advance of the President's news conference, White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross reiterated that Mr. Truman had long been an advocate of UMT, would like to see it enacted into law, but didn't want to jeopardize emergency legislation now before Congress by pressing for it now. Ross also said Secretary of Defense Johnson had the President's permission when he asked Congress Wednes-

$5-Billion 'Installment'

Senate Committee Unanimous In Approving Tax-Boost Bill

By The Associated Press

Republicans and Democrats formed a solid bloc yesterday to ram through the Senate Finance Committee President Truman's "first installment" five-billion-dollar tax-boosting bill.

After the unanimous committee vote, Chairman George (D., Ga.) predicted quick Senate and House approval. The bill may go to the White House by September 1.

Putting the Nation's tax laws on virtually a wartime footing, the legislation increases by about three billion dollars the income taxes of more than 50 million taxpayers, and boosts corporation levies by $1,500,000,000 a year. More millions will be picked up by plugging various tax-law loopholes, and by new excises on television sets, home freezers and slot machines.

It means that the Government will begin digging deeper into individuals' pocketbooks on October 1. The increase will amount to 20 percent for taxpayers in the middle and lower income brackets.

As one of its last actions on the bill, the committee stipulated that in the future the Government can take 87 percent in taxes from the income of individuals in the highest brackets. The present ceiling is 77 percent.

The bill provides a full tax exemption on the service pay of GIs fighting the Korean war, and reduces the taxes of their officers.

It gives special tax incentives to encourage retooling by industry to produce the things American fighting forces need.

The committee rejected an excess-profits tax on corporations as a part of the present bill, but it instructed its staff to prepare such proposals for later action.

Austin Hints We Will Free North Korea

Tells U. N. a Unified, Independent Korea Must Be Peace Aim

Lake Success, Aug. 17 (AP).—The United States today insisted that any United Nations peace program for Korea must include among its objectives creation of a unified and independent country.

This declaration, coming in the midst of the Korean conflict, was interpreted by some diplomats as a hint the unified command might keep on driving past the 38th Parallel and occupy all Korea once it started the North Korean Communists on the run.

Chief United States Delegate Warren R. Austin, however, avoided any direct reference to this possibility in outlining United States peace aims before the United Nations Security Council.

Austin said the primary objective, of course, must be cessation of hostilities. He added that this must be done in such a manner "that no opportunity is provided for another attempt at invasion."

This also was seen by some as a suggestion that the North Korean forces must be liquidated.

"Another objective," Austin said, "is to provide a demonstration of U. N. achievement in regard to

7 Tankmen Added to List

Survivors Identify Two Reds In Massacre of 39 Americans

By Hal Boyle

With U. S. First Cavalry (Friday) Aug. 18 (AP).—Seven captured American tankmen were reported today to have been executed in the same battle for Hill 303 north of Waegwan in which some 30 other Yanks were atrocity victims of North Koreans.

Bodies of seven soldiers were found on the road near their two tanks which had been knocked out two days before.

A general officer said he had been told they were executed.

Three American soldiers earlier today dramatically identified two North Korean prisoners as members of a group of Reds who shot to death 32 bound American captives.

The identifications were made by three of five prisoners in the group who escaped death.

They were Corpl. James Melvin Rudd, 18, of Salyersville, Ky.; Corpl. Roy L. Day, jr., of El Paso, Tex., and an 18-year-old red-headed ammunition bearer, Pvt. Roy Manring of Chicago, who has suffered seven wounds.

In a hospital clearing station tent they identified two out of six North Korean prisoners.

One was Kim Qwong Toack, an officer accused of giving the order to shoot the American prisoners. The other, Chon Tyong Tok, was identified as one of the group who fired at the Americans. They also identified tentatively a third prisoner, Pak Chin Qwon, as carrying out the slaughter order.

Manring was there lying on a litter. So were the six Communist prisoners including Pak and Chon, each of whom had been shot in the left leg.

Manring pointed to Pak with the heavy bandages:

"He carried a rifle and took one of my best buddies down for some water."

Day then identified Kim as the officer who had directed the shootings.

"That's the —— who gave the orders," he said.

The prisoners sat impassively silent in the heat.

Day said most of the North Koreans wore shorts but Kim was dressed in a suit with red stripes down the trousers and shoulder epaulets with one star and two red stripes. American officers said this was the rank of a major.

Manring said he could not identify Kim as the man who ordered the shooting.

Kim denied he was an officer or that he gave the shooting com-

Reds Rolling Grenades Down On Marines

Leathernecks Advance In River Bulge Drive But Pay Heavy Toll

By Marguerite Higgins

With Marines on the Naktong River, Aug. 17 (NYHT).—The Marines stormed to the crest of a 1000-foot ridge, their first objective on this front, in 4½ hours this morning. But the price they paid was the heaviest Marine casualty toll thus far in the Korean campaign.

Entrenched Communist guerillas who had been reinforced during last night peppered the advancing Marines with shells from mortars hidden on the reverse slope, cut at them with cleverly camouflaged machine guns and rolled hand grenades down the hill toward them.

This Is Worst Yet

The wounded and the heat exhaustion cases that stumbled into the front-line aid station during the morning were unanimous in saying: "This is the worst yet." The aid station was under sniper fire.

The attack today, aimed at squeezing out an enemy beachhead east of the Naktong River, was made in conjunction with units of the Twenty-fourth Infantry Division. The Marines moved

North Koreans Take Town 12 Miles From Emergency Capital; Drive Gains 3 Miles

BULLETIN

Eighth Army Headquarters in Korea, Friday, Aug. 18 (AP).—Syngman Rhee, head of the South Korean government, left his provisional capital at Taegu today and a majority of the members of the government were preparing to depart. U. S. Ambassador John J. Muccio also left the refugee-crowded capital after orders for civilians to evacuate were issued.

BULLETIN

On the Changnyong Front, (Friday), Aug. 18 (AP).—North Korean troops in the Changnyong bulge of the Naktong River have begun a withdrawal back across to the west bank, a United States Marine spokesman said today.

This is the sector, 23 miles southwest of Taegu, where United States Marines and Twenty-fourth Division Infantry opened a drive Thursday aimed at clearing out a bridgehead of an estimated 12,000 Reds.

The Marine spokesman said today that Marine Corsair pilots saw the Communists trying to cross back over the river front forward lines.

BULLETIN

U. S. Eighth Army Headquarters, Friday, Aug. 18 (AP).—South Korean troops have fought back into the port of Pohang on the east coast. Disclosing this today, an Eighth Army spokesman cautioned it was yet too early to say Pohang had been recaptured.

A South Korean spokesman asserted the South Korean army has recaptured Kigye, 8 miles northwest of Pohang on the east coast.

Tokyo (Friday), Aug. 18 (AP)—A massive tank-led Communist offensive punched from the north today to within 12 miles of Taegu and the more than half-million civilian population was ordered to quit that key American supply base in South Korea.

The threat from the north was frankly admitted by the United States Eighth Army in a communique as "the main threat."

Taegu's normal population was 300,000, but it has been swelled to between 500,000 and 700,000 by refugees streaming southward before the North Korean advance.

A force of 30,000 Reds sent a steel spearhead down from the vulnerable north, signaling what may be the long-expected major bid of the North Koreans.

A Communist regiment, advancing nearly three miles through South Korean defenders, captured the town of Kumhwa astride a main road leading to Taegu.

Some artillery and mortar shells, probably fired from the Naktong's west bank, hit Taegu.

Associated Press Correspondent Leif Erickson, at Eighth Army headquarters, reported it was possible the Reds were waiting to coordinate this drive from the direction of Kunwi with another to be launched in the vicinity of Waegwan. That is the sector hit Wednesday by B-29s in a move against a reported concentration of 60,000 Reds. Waegwan is 12 miles northwest of Taegu. Kunwi is 20 miles northeast of Waegwan and about 25 miles due north of Taegu.

While the northern thrust was under way, American Marines and United States Twenty-fourth Division infantrymen 25 miles southwest of Taegu today halted savage Red counterattacks in the bloody Naktong River bulge near Changnyong.

A front-line report said the Leathernecks, who took "Slaughterhouse Hill" yesterday, repulsed a bitter, bloody attempt by the Communists to regain that strategic high point. But an Eighth Army communique today said an enemy counterattack in the center

Ammunition-Passing Parson Kills 27 Reds

By Stan Swinton

With U. S. 25th Division, Aug. 17 (AP).—A fighting parson from Pennsylvania has killed 27 North Koreans despite a bullet in his thigh.

Capt. Weston

Capt. Logan I. Weston, of Frank, Pa., who praises the Lord and passes the ammunition by means of his own M-1 rifle, led his men in an attack in which 400 North Koreans were killed.

The tall, rangy Pennsylvanian spent seven and a half months behind the Japanese lines in World War II as a lieutenant in Merill's Marauders in Burma.

After the war, with his diploma from the Transylvania Bible School, he returned to the church. Now he's back fighting with the Seventh Infantry Regiment of the Twenty-fifth Division.

"We used to hit the Japs hard and then fade away," he said. "The Communists try it but don't do it very well. They strike and then stick around and get killed."

Weston was in a regimental command post the other day when 700 North Koreans attacked.

He grabbed a rifle and headed back to his company.

The Reds were setting up two machineguns. He shot them down. A bullet tore into his thigh.

The medics slapped on a bandage and tried to put the fighting parson to bed. They failed.

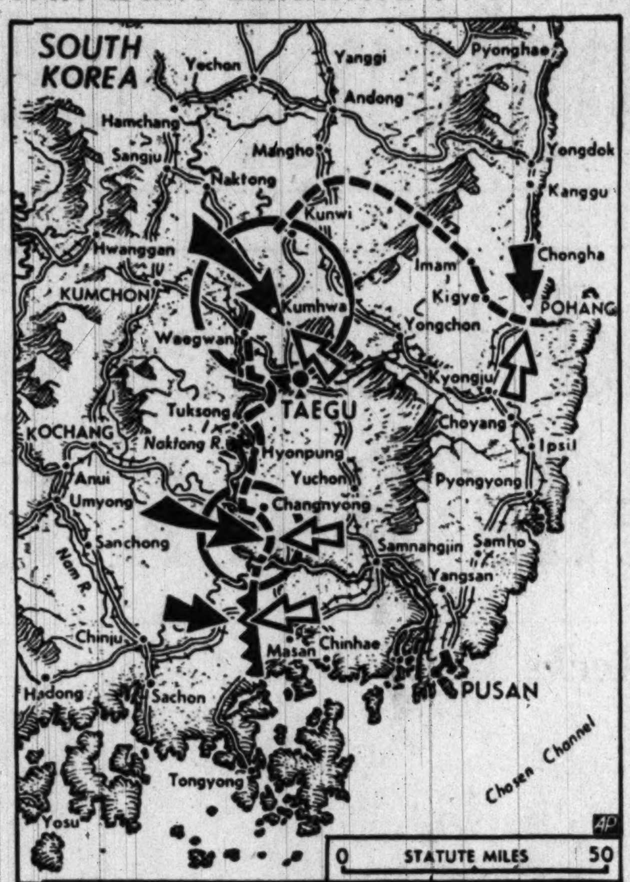
"He ran right back up to that hill," one of his soldiers told a reporter. "They hit him twice more and he stayed right up there."

Afterwards the boys started counting. They credited 27 of the enemy dead to the parson.

Weston—who had already had a Purple Heart and a Bronze Star with two clusters—refused to talk about the fight.

"But you should have seen those guys in my company," he said.

Reds Take Kumhwa . . .



AP Wirephoto Map

NORTH OF TAEGU—Circles locate areas of heaviest fighting in South Korea where North Korean forces, in a drive aimed at Taegu, yesterday took Kumhwa, about 12 miles north of the key city. The Reds also were attempting to expand their bridgehead over the Naktong River south of Changnyong. Lines were reported stable in the Masan and Pohang sectors of the line was stopped after a 100-yard advance.

The Leatherneck-Doughboy offensive had for its aim the elimination of a force or more than 10,000 Reds that has been built up for two weeks on the east side of the Naktong.

The Communist thrust against Kumhwa came from a staging area north of Wednesday's terrific B-29 assault.

Fighting around Waegwan, on the east bank of the Naktong, was localized for the present.

In the new punch from the north, three Red divisions hammered at a defensive force of more than two battle-hardened South Korean divisions, the First and the Sixth. American planes supported the South Koreans.

An Eighth Army communique at 10:50 a. m. today (8:50 p. m. EDT Thursday) said "the main threat to the United Nations defense line in Korea remains the massed Communist divisions between Waegwan and Kunwi."

At the east coast end of the front near Pohang, the communique said "the enemy was on the defensive."

Correspondent Erickson reported today that a Red tank column of undetermined strength just east of the drive to Kumhwa was stopped by United Nations air power. One tank was knocked out, another damaged and two or three artillery pieces destroyed. The air attacks were continuing.

The fall of Kumhwa was regarded as more a fallback and a readjustment of South Korean lines than a yield to Red power.

Erickson said fighting had raged around the town for two days before the South Koreans fell back and the Reds entered.

The situation in that area was described as "static" this morning.

But nearer Waegwan, where the South Korean First Division is on the right flank of the United States First Cavalry Division, the South Koreans succeeded yesterday in regaining 600 yards.

At the southern end of the line, defended by the United States Twenty-fifth Division the Red Sixth Division continued to build up strength west of Masan but had not yet opened the attack expected there by American officers.

The Reds mounted their offensive a few hours after the Marines lashed out at the Red bridgehead on the Naktong River's east bank near Changnyong, 23 miles southwest of Taegu.

The Leathernecks hacked out small gains in close-in combat described by Associated Press Correspondents Don Whitehead and Jack Macbeth as the "Battle of Slaughterhouse Hill." Units of the United States Twenty-fourth Infantry Division supported the Marine thrust.

In a field report today from that front Associated Press Correspondent Jack Macbeth said the Marines had repulsed counterattacks by the Reds aimed at regaining the hill. The said the Twenty-fourth also held firm to its gains.

Between these two sectors of greatest action there was bitter fighting in the Waegwan area, defended by the dismounted troops of the United States First Cavalry Division.

The enemy also was reported massing on the southeastern tip of the 120-mile front near Chinju. AP Correspondent Stan Swinton said ominous signs of an enemy buildup pointed to a possible early drive against the United States Twenty-fifth Infantry Division there.

But the Red push at Taegu was the most critical of all.

A United States Eighth Army spokesman told the Associated Press' Leif Erickson that between 25,000 and 30,000 Communist troops in three divisions had been hurled into the drive from the north.

The official Eighth Army war summary called the mounting thrust "the most serious one to United Nations forces.

The Red attack between Waegwan and Kunwi was east and south of the Naktong River, whose upper reaches in the north had been crossed by the Reds without opposition a fortnight ago.

A network of good roads lies directly ahead of the attacking Communists. Then winding, treacherous passes cut through the steep ridges before Taegu.

Heavy as it was, it was still to be determined if this was the long-prepared and much bruited major offensive intended to destroy the Allied defense line and to roll to Pusan, 55 miles from Taegu.

The action very definitely was an attack in large force in contrast to previous feeler-prober assaults along the U. N. line.

The front has rumbled from end-to-end during the past week with menacing signs that the Reds planned a now-or-never attempt to breach the line and push the United States and South Korean troops into the sea.

Fragmentary dispatches said the Red drive had been temporarily slowed Thursday, then began again to push forward against the South Korean defenders.

It was believed the Communists used the battle-proved tactics of tank-led infantry in frontal thrusts while infiltrating troops hit the flanks.

There had been reports of concentrations of tanks in numbers as high as 30 in the area, but no official information was available on this score.

Air activity today was confined largely to ground-support missions. Fifth Air Force planes flew 250 such sorties along the front.

General MacArthur's headquarters omitted its midnight summary for the third straight day.

mand. He said he was a private. So did the other two.

The identification was made in the presence of three First Cavlary staff officers who are conducting an investigation of the killers with a view of prosecuting them as war criminals.

The Reds herded 37 prisoners into a hillside gully west of Waegwan. They began slaughtering the Americans when a United States patrol approached. Three North Koreans were captured. Five Americans escaped with their lives.

Five other Americans were taken away by the Reds and their fate is unknown.

A First Cavalry Division spokesman said 26 bodies had been recovered. Four wounded were brought back as well as one survivor who was not wounded.

One survivor was Corpl. James Melvin Rudd of Salyersville, Ky.

The execution of the Americans took place on Hill 303 two hours before the Fifth Cavalry Regiment recaptured it from the Reds.

The Communists had seized the United States soldiers two days earlier.

Corporal Rudd said their captors posed as South Korean reinforcements which the Americans were expecting.

"They came right into our foxholes, shaking our hands and taking our weapons as if to examine them," Rudd said.

"Then they lined us up and marched us down a place north of Waegwan. They took us into a gully after taking our shirts, our shoes, our helmets and our ammo. Then they tied our hands with telephone wire, shoestrings and rawhide."

The Reds told the GIs they were going to take them to Seoul.

But, Rudd said, other United States soldiers were getting too close and the Communists moved the prisoners elsewhere and gave them their first food since their capture—a pear and an apple apiece.

"We dug holes in the sand for water," said the corporal. "Then they kicked sand in the hole and hit us with their weapons. Last night they took five out of our original group of 43 men and I never did know what they did to them."

Rudd said the Communists then marched them back down to the gully north of Waegwan, where they had been stripped and bound.

At daybreak, he said, the Communists began to exchange fire with approaching American soldiers.

"We sat there all morning with our hands still bound behind us," Rudd said.

"That afternoon," he continued, "they took us to another ravine. We were worried because Corporal Day had heard them talking the night before and an officer said they would kill us if our own troops got too close.

"There were two guards watching us. They got on each end of the ravine and hollered something and about 14 Red soldiers ran up. Then the guards and soldiers opened up on us with burp guns."

Rudd said he was saved because he was lying on the ground and a soldier standing near him was killed and fell across him.

Day escaped injury, although a bullet ripped through his belt and another through his pants leg.

"Our patrol kept coming and the Gooks got scared," Rudd said. "They started to leave, but some of our boys were moaning and groaning, so the Gooks came back and shot the wounded—as many as they saw. Then they took off north over the hill towards the river (Naktong.") into the front line here after a swift and secret journey northward f... the port of Masan, in the far south.

They started up the rocky slope at 8 a. m., after artillery and Marine Corsair fighter planes pummeled the ridge. From a hill to the rear, a group of correspondents had a perfect view of the attack, which, as often in this guerilla warfare, had about it a sort of newsreel quality.

Through binoculars, we saw two American tanks lumber up the valley road and fire at the ridge to cover the advancing Marines. We could see North Koreans clad in white and brown dash back over the crest when shells dropped among them. Then they would creep forward into their original positions as the barrage lifted. We watched tensely as enemy mortar shells gashed the ground and threw up dust among the Marines. At one juncture, mortar shells were falling so thickly it seemed impossible that one could survive.

They took a heavy toll.

"Those Communists are so accurate with their mortars they can practically drop them in your hip pocket," was the observation later of Medical Corpsman John Stanley of Columbus, Ohio.

A number of times, the enemy machineguns and hand grenades would force the hard-pressed Marines to give ground. Then the Marine planes would be called in, and, with nerve-shattering noise and speed, would claw up the ridge only a few yards ahead of the Americans.

We could see the flashes of rocket fire as plane after plane skimmed deep into the valley and reverberations pounded along the valley's walls.

The North Koreans, supposed to have a division east of the Naktong in this sector, used mortar bursts not only to pepper the advancing American troops but also to reach back into the battalion command post. This latter circumstance, plus the further fact that enemy snipers were creeping closer from house to house in the village opposite the command post, made the situation of the aid station a rather uncomfortable one. We reached there about 11 a. m.

As the wounded poured in, word came that some of the worst losses had been among the Medical Corpsmen themselves.

2d Army Explains Policy on Doctors

Second Army authorites yesterday outlined deferment policies toward reserve medical officers in the District, Maryland, Virginia and the other five States in the Second Army area.

Reserve medical officers in the following five categories may be deferred from calls to active military duty:

1. Those who have not completed at least one year of internship training.
2. Senior residents.
3. Those now pursuing a full-time post-graduate course.
4. Those whose activity in teaching, research and allied endeavors is considered necessary to the maintenance of the national health, safety or interest.
5. Those practicing in communities where health would be jeopardized if such officers were to be ordered to active duty.

D. C. Quota 17 Doctors

These categories were given by Second Army officials to representatives of State medical societies at a meeting at Fort Meade, Second Army headquarters.

Discussion at the meeting centered on the method of caling 141 Army reserve doctors to active duty by October 6. The figure is the Second Army's quota, and includes 17 doctors to be called from the District, 10 from Virginia and eight from Maryland.

Col. Harold W. Glattley, Second Army surgeon, asked the medical society representatives to form committees which will set up priorities for the recall of medical reservists for active duty by October 6.

Similar meetings with dentist groups will be held within the next few days, a spokesman said.

Good Day for Recruiting

Among those attending yesterday's meeting were Dr. William M. Ballinger, president, and Theodore Wiprud, secretary, District of Columbia Medical Society; Dr. Austin Pearre of Frederick, Md., president of the Maryland society; Dr. Powell Williams of Richmond, Va., chief of medicine, McGuire General Hospital, Richmond, and Henry S. Johnson, public relations director, Virginia Medical Society.

Besides Colonel Glattly, Maj. Gen. Clift Andrus, deputy Second Army commander, also participated.

Meanwhile, local recruiters for the three services had a good day yesterday, all reporting an unusually high rate of acceptances.

Every man of 17 who applied at the Army Air Force recruiting station yesterday was accepted, Lieut. Donald Knott, processing officer, reported. Thirteen were sworn in, eight for the Army and five for the Air Force, while the other four will have their processing completed today.

At the Navy station, five of eight applicants were accepted, and 10 previous applicants were sworn into the regular Navy. The Marines accepted three out of 15, also a high percentage, and enlisted three others after previous processing.

375 Reservists Due for Md. Call

Baltimore, Aug. 17 (AP)—The Maryland Military District announced today 375 individual enlisted reservists will be called up soon for physical examinations.

The announcement said the call will be issued within the next few days

Col. Meloy, Area Man, Wounded

COL. GUY S. MELOY, JR.
. . . recovering in Tokyo hospital

Col. Guy S. Meloy, jr., a Washington-area man who commanded a regiment in the Twenty-fourth Division, has been wounded in Korea but "is getting along very well" in Tokyo General Hospital.

Colonel Meloy was wounded by an "explosive bullet" which "tore up pretty badly" the calf of his right leg, his father, Guy S. Meloy, sr., of Lanham, Prince Georges County said.

His son who commanded the Nineteenth Infantry, was wounded about July 19, Mr. Meloy said, and his general insisted he "go back."

Colonel Meloy, who is 47, was born in Lanham. During World War II he was chief of staff to another Washington-area boy, Maj. Gen. Anthony McAuliffe, who commanded the 102d Airborne Division and who said "Nuts" to the German surrender demand at Bastogne.

Mrs. Meloy and two sons, William and John, accompanied Colonel Meloy to Japan when he was assigned there last September. A third son, Guy S. Meloy, 3d, is a second-year man at West Point.

His tours of duty have included chief of staff, Tank Destroyer School, Camp Hood, Tex.; chief of staff, Airborne Center, Fort Benning, Ga. air activites control officers with Army Ground Forces Board No. 1, and commandant of the ROTC unit at Texas A. and M. College.

U. S., U. N. Accept Philippine Offer Of 5000 Troops

The Philippine republic's offer of a 5000-man combat team for action in Korea was accepted yesterday by the United States and the United Nations.

President Truman sent a message of thanks to Philippine President Elpidino Quirino in which he said: "I am proud that the soldiers of our two nations will again stand shoulder-to-shoulder against the forces of aggression."

Wednesday, the United States and the U. N. accepted an offer by Thailand to supply 4000 combat troops for the U. N. forces in Korea.

AF Pilots Shun Traps of Korean Radio Loreleis

Tokyo, Friday, Aug. 18 (U.P.)—The North Koreans have copied an old World War II trick of using radio Loreleis to lure pilots into concentrations of antiaircraft fire, but they are'nt having much luck, the Air Force reported today.

Pilots are onto the trick and they make sure they don't attack in areas where ground controllers tell them they will find juicy targets, unless they know the ground controllers.

Army Denies Any Shortage Of Korea Maps

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Published reports that the Army was so poorly equipped with maps of Korea that it was forced to borrow a supply from the Library of Congress were denied yesterday.

An Army spokesman at the afternoon Pentagon briefing read a report from the Corps of Engineers that one million maps in 370 varieties were issued in the first 10 days of the Korean conflict. In addition, the report said, the invasion of South Korea found an adequate supply of maps and lithograph plates in the Far East theater.

The report added that the Army Engineers also had supplied Korean maps to the Navy and the Marine Corps. Units alerted in this country and those sent to the theater, it said, were adequately supplied with maps here.

The Army spokesman explained that the current North Korean drive north of Taegu apparently was being made by six Red divisions, some of which may have been moved from the area saturated by B-29 bombers Tuesday. Air Force spokesman said no estimate of damage to the enemy from the air attack has been received here.

A Navy spokesman reported that Alied warships has bombarded shore targets on the east coast of Korea north of the 40th Parallel. He said he had no further information about the action.

The spokesman added some details to the story of the rescue by sea of South Korean forces surrounded by Communists between Yongdok and Pohang. The South Koreans, identified in Tokyo as elements of the Third Division, were cut off when Red troops drove down past their left flank.

The Navy spokesman said a helicopter was used to bring out seriously wounded men while surface craft took off the rest.

Services Allotments Measure Clears Senate, House Groups

Federal payments of $45 to $85 a month to families of the lowest grades of enlisted men are provided in legislation approved yesterday by Senate and House committees.

A man would have to add $40 a month to this out of his pay. A recruit starts at $75 a month.

The bills vary greatly in detail, but both call the payments "quarters allowance." This is the term for allotments to families which are not provided homes at military bases. At present the lowest grades do not receive such allowances.

The Senate bill, approved by the Armed Services Committee, may be ready for Senate consideration next week. In the House, an Armed Services Subcommittee gave approval to its bill. It will go before the full committee for action.

Meantime, the Army announced that it will not require Korean service for sole surviving sons of families which have lost sons or daughters in the armed service since the start of World War II.

Under both family allowance bills, Government support in the case of an enlisted man in one of the lower grades, having one dependent, would come to $45, plus $40 allotted from the man's paycheck.

For two dependents, perhaps a wife and child, the Government would pay $70 under the House bill; $67.50 under the Senate bill.

For more than two dependents, the House bill provides $85; the Senate bill, $75. In each case, the enlisted man would allot $40 a month from his own pay.

In the House bill, these figures would apply to privates, privates first class and corporals, a subcommittee member said.

The Senate bill, however, would apply them to privates and privates first class, an official said, putting corporals into another allotment group.

The Senate proposal provides that any man with more than three dependents would be eligible for hardship discharge or to be deferred from induction.

For all grades of sergeant in the Army—and comparable grades in the other services—the House bill provides:

For one dependent, $70 from the Government; for two or more dependents, $85.

No deductions would be made from the pay checks in these grades, under the House bill. Subcommittee members said deductions were provided for the lower grades because most of the men are younger.

Under the Senate bill, families of corporals and lower rank sergeants would be entitled to $67.50 where there are one or two dependents, and $75 for three. The men would add $60 to this from their base pay.

Senate Committee Hears Report by Johnson

For two hours yesterday Defense Secretary Johnson reviewed the world military situation at a secret session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee with "very encouraging" resutts.

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.), who described the meeting as "super-secret," told reporters Johnson discussed "the situation in Korea, the four billion dollar defense appropriation and the general outlook" He explained, as did other committee members, that those present had agreed not to discuss what transpired outside the committee room.

It was learned, however, that a threatened Republican cross-examination of Johnson on the Nation's military unreadiness did not materialize. Questioning was reported as "straightforward" and designed to elicit information.

When Johnson emerged from the committee room in the Capitol building he told reporters he and the committee had "talked over the whole world situation" and that he was "very happy" at the reception given his report. He added that "everybody agreed" not to say what was discussed and that no stenographic record was made.

Connally said Johnson would be recalled to enlarge upon some phases of yesterday's report. The Foreign Relations Committee, he declared, was "taking an interest in military affairs because foreign relations has to do with our ability to meet aggression and to defend ourselves."

Arm Japs to Defend Selves, MacArthur Says

NYHT News Service

General MacArthur believes the Allies should let Japan arm and defend itself to the limit if it is attacked.

MacArthur stated his views in a letter to Commander Harold Russell of AMVETS. He emphasized that Japan remains under the policy control of the Allied Powers pending a peace treaty and added:

"Should the course of world events require that all mankind stand to arms in defense of human liberty and Japan comes within the orbit of immediately threatened attack, then the Japanese should mount the maximum defensive power which their resources will permit.

While the general did not go beyond saying that the Japanese should be allowed to "defend" themselves, an obvious inference seemed to be that in the event of attack that "defense" might well turn into offensive action.

We Total 151,376,000

The Census Bureau estimated yesterday that the population of continental United States was 151,376,000 persons on July 1. That is an increase of 856,000 over the tentative count of 150,520,000 on April 1, date of the official biennial census.

The Situation is Fluid!

THE Reds count their strength in millions of human slaves. America is the leader of a different kind of world. Lives are precious in a democracy. Our slaves are machines, made for peace where possible, for war when necessary.

To make the machines of war, America's vast steel industry is instantly convertible from its peacetime work. Molten steel is poured fresh every day in enormous quantities by our country's steel companies. Add the right quantities of alloying materials, and the searing brew is on its way for tanks instead of the wonderful products of America's peaceful civilian life.

Q. How much steel has Uncle Joe got?

Ans. Best available information puts steel production of all the iron curtain countries at about 30,000,000 tons per year.

Q. How much steel has Uncle Sam got?

Ans. We have steel capacity right now for over 100,000,000 tons. New facilities under way will also add more than 6,000,000 tons.

Q. How much steel can our friends make?

Ans. Countries outside the iron curtain, not counting U. S., can produce 56,000,000 tons of steel per year.

Total All Free Countries, 156,000,000 tons

United States alone, 100,000,000 tons

Total Iron Curtain, 30,000,000 tons

Q. How does America stay so far ahead of the world in steel production?

Ans. It's competition and freedom to take a chance that does this. More than 200 companies compete for steel orders in America. That makes the business strong, resourceful and ever-expanding. It works fine in peace. It saves lives in war to have a big and strong steel industry.

It may surprise you to know how much America's steel industry has grown and how fast it is growing:

1940 81,619,496 tons
1943 90,589,190 tons

 BUILDING OR PLANNED, MORE THAN 6,000,000 TONS NEW CAPACITY

Korea Airlift Hauls Record Load for Day

Fifth Air Force Headquarters in Korea (Friday), Aug. 18 (AP).—The United States Fifth Air Force yesterday set a new one-day record of ying supplies to United Nations forces in Korea.

One hundred and twenty cargo transports carried 164.7 tons of cargo and 542 passengers.

The Fifth Air Force flew 475 sorties during the 24-hour period, most of them in close support of ground troops.

Heavy fighter support was given South Korean troops along the front northeast of Waegwan, where a Red push by some 30,000 men is under way. One hundred and eight sorties were flown in that area. One tank was reported destroyed, another damaged. Villages were bombed and strafed.

Six interceptor missions were flown in the area of Japan's Kyushu Island against unidentified aircraft. One proved to be friendly. The Air Force spokesman said there was no report on identity of the other five planes.

Katz Approved for U. N.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday approved Ambassador Milton Katz, United States special representative in Europe, to be United States representative on the U.N. Economic Commission for Europe. Katz succeeds W. Averill Harriman in both jobs.

Wiley Asks U. S. to Avoid Red China Fight

By The Associated Press

Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) yesterday called for an all-out effort to keep the Chinese Communists out of the South Korean fighting.

Saying the Russians had "baited a trap" in Asia, the ranking active Republican member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee declared in a statement:

"The greatest challenge that we now face is to use every ounce of diplomatic strategy that we have in preventing the Chinese Red armies from becoming involved with us in a titanic struggle.

"Such a struggle would bleed us completely dry—bleed us of our manpower, bleed us of our arms, bleed us of our economic strength."

The United States, he said, must use its friends in the Philippines, India, China and elsewhere to prevent the Communists "from attempting to stir up a race war against the United States."

Wiley said he had asked the Administration for a complete report on its plans to avoid tangling with the Chinese Reds in Korea and Southeast Asia.

Wiley made no mention of President Truman's order to the Seventh Fleet to defend the island of Formosa, where the Chinese Nationalist government is entrenched, against Communist invasion.

Neither did he take note of repeated Republican demands that the United States send military supplies to the Nationalists.

Wiley blamed the Administration for lack of military preparedness and home-front economic and defense planning.

"In fact," he said, "all we have is the bluff and bluster of the incompetent, unprepared Democratic Administration."

The Wisconsin lawmaker defended a statement issued by himself and three other Republican Foreign Relations committeemen criticizing Administration policies in the Far East.

The statement, issued last weekend and denounced by Democrats as "political pettyfogging," apparently has ended all bipartisanship in the 13-member committee which has a major hand in implementing foreign policy.

"We will not allow the cloak of national unity to be wrapped around horrible blunders," Wiley asserted.

Truman Renames Dulles as U. N. Delegate

By The Associated Press

John Foster Dulles yesterday accepted an appointment by President Truman to serve again as a delegate to the United Nations.

He said he will not be a candidate for the Republican Senate nomination in New York and will continue his present role of Republican foreign policy consultant to Secretary of State Acheson.

Appointment of the 62-year-old New Yorker was expected to have two immediate effects: Lessening some fears of a complete breakup of the bipartisan foreign policy front traceable to recent Senate debates on Korea and scrambling the New York GOP senatorial picture.

Dulles made the announcement after a call on the President. He read this statement to newsmen:

"The President has asked me if I would be available to serve again on the United States delegation to the General Assembly of the United Nations which will meet in mid-September.

"At This Critical Time"

"I have told him that I would.

"At this critical time the supreme task is that of making the United Nations into an effective instrument for peace and justice.

"The opportunity to help in that is one that I welcome, even though it excludes my running again for the United States Senate from New York.

"My service with the United States delegation will also emphasize how vital it is to continue bipartisanship in relation to foreign policy."

Dulles served on the U. N. delegation until his appointment July 7, 1949, by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey to a five-month term in the Senate to succeed Democrat Robert F. Wagner, who resigned because of ill health.

He was defeated last November by Democrat Herbert H. Lehman by about 200,000 votes. Lehman went down the line for the Truman program and Dulles bitterly attacked the Administration, particularly on the home front. He assailed what he called "statism," saying there was a trend toward an all-powerful state.

Lehman, who preceded Dulles on yesterday's White House calling list, told reporters he shook hands with his former opponent and wished him well.

The scene contrasted sharply with the situation last winter when Mr. Truman was vacationing in Key West, Fla. The President told a news conference on that trip that Dulles was a part of the bipartisan foreign policy front until he got into politics.

Work Together Closely

Shortly after that, however, Secretary Acheson announced in Washington that Dulles was taking over a post as principal consultant to him at the State Department.

Since then, Dulles and the Administration have worked together closely on all aspects of foreign policy, and the New Yorker has been a frequent visitor to Capitol Hill.

Dulles' name had figured prominently in the New York Senate nomination speculation along with many others. The nominating convention will be held early next month. Governor Dewey, who has announced he will not run again for Governor, has been mentioned as a possible Senate candidate, along with William J. Donovan, lawyer and former head of the Office of Strategic Services in the last war; Thomas Curran, Secretary of State; Edward Corsi, State industrial commissioner, and others.

British Ship, Chinese Red Guns in Duel

Hongkong, Aug. 17 (AP). — The British destroyer Concord fought a 30-minute gun battle today against three Chinese Communist shore batteries while approaching Hongkong.

Lieut. Comdr. I. D. McLaughlan, captain of the British ship, said the destroyer fired in self defense after the Red batteries on the tiny islands of Taitami, Puntin and Lingting opened up with three-pound shells.

The destroyer was not damaged, but one man aboard was reported slightly injured. The destroyer's 4.7-inch guns might have damaged or destroyed some of the Chinese gun emplacements.

The Concord ceased fire when the Reds stopped shooting as the destroyer drew out of range on its course to Hongkong.

The duel occurred about 12 miles south of Hongkong and 6 miles west of the spot where three merchant ships, the American Steel Rover, the British Hangsang and the Norwegian Pleasantville, were fired on in three successive days last week.

The British frigate Whitesand Bay exchanged fire August 2 with Communist gun emplacements on Lingting island, it was officially disclosed today after the attack on the Concord.

There were new reports that Chinese Communists have again warned all foreign ships not to infringe on Chinese territory.

U. S. Hints Drive Into N. Korea

Korea that will deter and prevent aggression anywhere."

The United States delegate spoke after a 90-minute closed-door session at which the 11-nation Council again failed to break its procedural deadlock over seating of Korean representatives. The meeting was called by Russia's Jakob A. Malik, Council president for this month. Another private meeting will be held Monday.

Malik said he had listened carefully to Austin's speech, but found nothing new. He said Austin talked about objectives in Korea, but that "is only to divert public opinion from what is taking place in Korea today."

"Blood is being spilled," Malik said. "Women, old men are dying, peaceful towns are barbarously bombarded. Tens of thousands of American soldiers are dying in Korea. The press has reports which show they don't know what they are dying for."

Then, referring to Austin's statement on unifying Korea, Malik said this makes it clear the United States wants to extend the scope of the war.

"How can we talk about unifying Korea, holding elections and so forth without having heard the representatives of both sides in Korea?" Malik asked.

Malik rejected also an appeal by Austin to use his influence to call off the Communist North Koreans and end the war.

He said everybody knows the Soviet Union's influence, but "it will not use its influence in the American way, the way Secretary of State Acheson uses it with (South Korean President) Syngman Rhee."

Austin had this to say about unifying Korea:

"The Korean people expect that when their Gethsemane has passed, they will all have the right to freedom and unity.

"Korea's prospects would be dark if any action of the United Nations were to condemn it to exist indefinitely as 'half slave and half free' or even one-third slave and two-thirds free.

"The United Nations has consistently worked for a unified country, an independent Korea. The United Nations will not want to turn from that objective now."

Discussion of India's new "Little Six" peace proposal was sidetracked by a new round of speeches, including declarations by Cuba, Nationalist China, Yugoslavia and Norway.

Most delegates have made it clear they want more time to study the Indian plan, which would name the six elected, nonpermanent members of the Council as a special committee to study peace proposals.

The United States, meanwhile, circulated to the delegates its second report on operations of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's unified command. The report urged other U. N. members to speed up their contributions of ground forces to aid the United States troops at the front.

Cuba's Alberto I. Alvarez opened the public meetings by assailing Malik for the way he has conducted himself as Council president. Alvarez said Malik had ended Russia's seven-month boycott of the U. N. with the sole idea of aiding the aggressors.

The Cuban delegate said Malik had come back to the Council with a peace plan "built in the image of Moscow."

"You have taken up the presidency of the Council," Alvarez said, "with the premeditated purpose of making it a servant of Russia."

'Watch' on Ship Denied

Halifax, N. S., Aug. 17 (AP).—The Royal Canadian Navy today said it had no knowledge of a foreign destroyer operating off the Canadian east coast. The Halifax Chronicle-Herald had reported the navy was keeping a "close watch" on such a destroyer sighted off Halifax yesterday. The statement said the sloop Snipe may have been mistaken for an unknown destroyer.

Jones Boys' Cameras Recording War's Fury

India Intercedes as China Reds Menace Tibet

New Delhi, India, Aug. 17 (AP).—A Foreign Ministry source today said India has made overtures to Communist China in an effort to preserve the political independence of Tibet.

A Chinese Nationalist spokesman declared in Taipeh, Formosa, that Chinese Red troops are moving toward Tibet—ancient, lofty land of the Lamas—from the east and north. He said the troops from the east were under one-eyed Gen. Liu Po-cheng.

The Foreign Ministry source said India has expressed the hope to Communist China that the status of Tibet will be settled by friendly negotiations. India would be pleased, he said, if Tibet were left autonomous under Chinese rule. India recognizes Mao Tze-tung's Red regime as the government of China.

The Chinese Communists have offered Tibet "regional autonomy" if the Tibetan ruler, the Dalai Lama, and his government join the Chinese Red regime peacefully. The Tibetans were invited to send a delegation to Peiping to work out details.

A delegation came to India several months ago, en route to China, but was unable to get a British visa for Hongkong.

The Ministry source said Tibet suggested to Peiping some time ago that negotiations be held in New Delhi between the Tibetan delegation, now at Kalimpong, Sikkim, on the Indo-Tibetan border, and the Communist Chinese Ambassador, who is expected here shortly.

A pro-Communist Hongkong newspaper, Wen Wei Pao, reported August 5 that General Liu had announced Tibet would be invaded. He was quoted as saying this move was aimed at driving out the "aggressive influence of American imperialism."

The newspaper quoted Liu as saying Tibet's political and military institutions and officals would remain unchanged, but Tibetan troops "will become a part of the national defense armed forces of the Chinese People's (Communist) Republic."

Europe Group Votes To Study Army Unity

Strasbourg, France, Aug. 17 (AP). The European Assembly's General Affairs Committee today overrode British Laborite and Scandinavian opposition and voted to take up Winston Churchill's proposal for a unified European army to guard against Soviet aggression.

The 28-member committee voted 19 to six, with three abstentions, to examine proposals for a European defense convention, a unified army and defense ministry.

All 15 member nations of the Consultative Assembly—the lower house of the unofficial Parliament of Europe—were represented in the vote. It broke a two-day deadlock and gave the go-ahead to further elaboration of Churchill's proposal.

Former French Premier Georges Bidault, chairman of the committee, declined to reveal which delegates opposed the decision or to comment on rumors of a walkout.

The committee told its subcommittee on security to stick within Assembly statutes prohibiting debate on strictly military matters. This compromise on procedure satisfied at least one Swedish delegate—Liberal Bertil Ohlin—who cast his vote with the majority.

ECA Reports Basic Strides In Europe

Th Economic Cooperation Administration reported yesterday the rshall Plan had made a signifi nt basic change in world trade tterns and that member nations have made "notable gains" ard achieving economic stability

In it report covering the period uary-March, 1950, it said the Western European nations re less upon United States a began trading more among th selves and built up increased fidence in their own currencies.

In a spec chapter on Korean aid, ECA sa the Communist invasion "has, course, completely disrupted th economy of that country and terupted the impressive gains hich South Korea had achieved the brief period" since VJ-Day.

In the first hree months of this year, it said outh Korean industrial activity was 80 percent higher than 19 and self-supporting in food p duction. It said crop prospects "re promising" before the war la waste to the countryside and h d harvesting.

ECA conceded, owever, that even before the i asion South Korea suffered fro tremendous inflation. It said $2 00,000 was authorized in aid-to- ea, bringing the overall total t 98,800,000.

Concerning Europe he agency said trade among th Marshall Plan nations climbed 114 percent of the prewar le , almost one-third higher than ear ago. For March alone, it said ade was 126 percent higher.

Singled out for speci significance was the fact that U. S. adverse trade balance dec ed 40 percent in the year.

This means a basic cha has begun in world trade pa erns, ECA's report said. Europe nations are cutting down thei dollar purchases and this coun is importing more, thus beginni to reverse the traditional adv se balance.

The agency meanwhile nounced a new regulation desig to prevent European nations fr spending scarce dollars for EC goods which came from Europ in the first place.

Greek Cabinet Collapse Now Held Likely

Athens, Aug. 17 (AP).—The imminent collapse of the coalition cabinet of Premier Nicholas Plastiras was seen tonight in the announcement that the five Liberal Party ministers will resign.

Liberal leader Sophocles Venizelos, who made the announcement, has demanded Plastiras' resignation. The Premier's position has been uncertain because of Cabinet resentment over his policy of amnesty for Communists convicted of treason.

With Plastiras and King Paul both absent from the capital—the Premier in northern Greece and the King on a small east coast island—the actual fall of the government cannot take place until both return.

Liberal deputies stated that the Liberal Party had joined the coalition government only under American pressure. One line, which had been striken out before the statement was issued, said the Americans threatened to suspend aid to Greece if the coalition was not formed with Liberals participating.

Venizelos, who held the premiership briefly with a Liberal Cabinet after the March 5 parliamentary elections, resigned when the United States expressed displeasure over his lack of a broad majority in Parliament.

Rogge Pushes Peace Plan

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 17 (AP).—An American and a Russian in the Communist-supported world peace movement are talking over a plan to settle the war in Korea.

They are O. John Rogge, a New York attorney and a member of the executive committee of the World Defenders of Peace, and Journalist Ilya Ehrenburg of Moscow, a guest of the committee's meeting here.

Rogge disclosed tonight he had seen Ehrenburg twice outside the session and was meeting him again to see if he could get his agreement to a resolution on the way.

The resolution is one of three Rogee is seeking to bring beore the committee, which ends its three-day quarterly meeting tomorrow.

It urges that the United Nations Security Council set up a commission representing all its members except China to study the Korean dispute.

This commission would hear all interested parties and report on possibilities of a settlement of the war and the unification of Korea.

Rogge, a former Assistant United States Attorney General and vice president of the peace defenders, said Ehrenburg willingly talked the matter over with him. He added, however, he was not hopeful of agreement.

Rogge pointed out his resolution takes no sides on this issue, but in a speech here today Ehrenburg, without mentioning the subject directly, said people should not sit in the U. N. "who have no right."

Indonesia Demands Area

Jakarta, Indonesia, Aug. 17 (AP).—President Soekarno today declared the Dutch will have a fight on their hands if they do not yield control of West New Guinea to Indonesia by the end of 1950.

The Dutch-Indonesian agreement that gave Indonesia independence last December 27, in a joint union under Queen Juliana's crown, provided West New Guinea would remain in the crown's control for a year. In that period, the Dutch were to study political and economic factors of the area with a view to granting it sovereignty as a part of Indonesia.

Soekarno declared the Netherlands is maintaining "colonial control" of West New Guinea. Australia and Britain share the eastern half of the big island, which lies just south of the equator.

The president spoke from the palace steps before a crowd of thousands observing the fifth anniversary of the Indonesian proclamation of independence and the inauguration this week of a new unitary republic.

Red and white flags of the republic flew in the capital. Chinese Communist flags also appeared. Indonesia has recognized Red China. The military governor of Jakarta rohibited the Chinese population rom flying Nationalist China's em-lem.

Yugoslav Invasion Now Is Believed Out

Belgrade, Aug. 17 (AP).—Chances of a Russian-inspired invasion of Yugoslavia this year have been discounted by Western military strategists on the basis of a survey that began soon after the first shots were fired in the Korean war.

This information came from two responsible officials who disclosed separately results of their own investigations and conclusions by their superior officers.

Piecemeal reports leaking from inside the Iron Curtain thus far have shown little desire for war in the satellite nations bordering Yugoslavia. In fact, there are some signs that a Soviet order to fight Yugoslavia might boomerang into widespread opposition and perhaps revolt.

A general survey was ordered immediately after the North Korean attack because the Western powers wanted to know how far they could become committed in Asia without risking such security as they now have on the European continent.

Inside Yugoslavia the survey found there is planty of preparedness but little evidence that the country expects a Balkan war.

On top of this, there has been a marked decline in reported border incidents recently. When Russia wishes to apply pressure on the government of Premier Marshal Tito, these border incidents increase. This keeps a big part of Yugoslavia's manpower in uniform and out of vitally needed production.

Reports of Western observers here emphasized that a Communist invasion such as that in South Korea would not have the same advantage of surprise in Yugoslavia. Tito's army had tough training in the hills of Bosnia and Slovenia during the last war and is efficient and well armed.

U. S. Forced to Review Aid Policy in Yugoslavia

Belgrade, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—The United States is being forced to review its present aid policy in Yugoslavia as a result of certain weaknesses becoming more apparent in this Communist but anti-Cominform state, well informed sources said today.

They said this review was necessitated also by the growing United States defense expenditure, and its drain on available United States funds for foriegn aid.

It was learned that the Yugoslav government has applied for a third loan from the United States Export-Import Bank. The bank has extended 40 million dollars of the $74,100,000 Yugoslavia has received in foreign credit in the two years since Marshal Tito was expelled from the Cominform.

The future role the West may play in the Balkans also hinges on the outcome of the 25 million dollar Yugoslav loan request from the World Bank.

Farouk-Sadek Union Hinted Set in France

Deauville, France, Aug. 17 (U.P.). King Farouk of Egypt, driving his own car, led a procession of seven limousines into this seaside resort tonight amid rumors he planned to marry 17-year-old Narriman Sadek during his stay.

A large crowd that had awaited Farouk's arrival for hours applauded as he drove up to the Hotel du Golfe.

A St. Moritz report said the beauteous Narriman also had left for Deauville. It was Narriman who was reported to have jilted Zaki Hashem, 27-year-old United Nations economist, after Farouk saw her at a party.

Another St. Moritz report said a Moslem official had arrived from either the London or the Paris Mosque to officiate at the royal wedding.

(In London, Dr. Abdel-Kadar, head of the London Islamic Cultural Center and mosque, said he had received no request to send an imam to Deauville and could see no reason for one since "there must be an imam in France who could perform the ceremony.")

Narriman was reported to have left Cairo for Europe three months ago and has been placed variously since then in Rome, Geneva, St. Moritz and elsewhere in Switzerland.

The mystery of her whereabouts was cleared partly today when the swank Suvretta Hotel in St. Moritz confirmed she had been staying there "for some time." The hotel said she had left—and declined to reveal where she was going.

The 30-year-old king reserved 25 rooms in the plush Hotel du Golfe. He arrived at Marseille two days ago in his yacht and has been driving leisurely through France.

Court Rules Graziani Should Be Freed

Rome, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—The Rome military tribunal ruled today that former Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, recently convicted as a war criminal, should be freed from jail August 29.

Most of his prison sentence of 20 years was canceled because of postwar amnesties and time served. He had been expected to be released from jair next year. He has been in prison continuously since April 29, 1945.

Berlin No Nearer War Than Year Ago, Taylor Says

Berlin, Aug. 17 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor said today "Berlin is no nearer war than it was a year ago," and he is satisfied Allied troops can handle any situation that may arise here, short of an actual Soviet attack.

"Outright intervention by the Russians is something else," the American commandant said in an interview. "That would be an act of war."

With 250,000 Russian troops and about 100,000 East German Communist people's police on duty in the Soviet zone which surrounds this quartered city, some German and Allied sources have compared Berlin to Korea in its potentialities.

Gen. Eddy to Take Post

Bremerhaven, Germany, Aug. 17 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, new commanding general of the United States Army in Europe, arrived in Bremerhaven today aboard the U. S. transport Alexander Patch. He succeeds Lieut. Gen. Clarence L. Huebner. Eddy will leave tonight for Heidelberg to assume his new post.

3 Top Poles Quit Red Embassy Here

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Reporter

The tenuous loyalty of Polish nationals to the present Warsaw regime is revealed anew in the desertion of three top officials from the Polish Embassy here.

These defections, while significant in themselves, are viewed largely as additional cracks in the artificial political structure the Communists are maintaining in Poland by force. Already more than a score of other Poles similarly have split with Warsaw during the past four years.

WLADYSLAW NIZINSKI
. . . defies recall by Reds

Like many thousands of Poles in and out of government, the three Embassy aides are known to be non-Communist. As such, they paid lip service to the Red Warsaw regime until the necessity for drastic action came. When it came, they chose to desert rather than serve the Communists in posts at home or in other Red satellite countries.

First to resign and seek asylum were Stefan Rogozinski, Embassy counselor, and Janusz Zoltowski, financial counselor and second-ranking official under Ambassador Josef Winiewicz. Both acted about two months ago, it was revealed yesterday.

STEFAN ROGOZINSKI
. . . appeals for asylum

'Family Reasons' Given

The third resignation came early in August from Wladyslaw Nizinski, second secretary at the Embassy.

The Polish Embassy officially disclosed the Zoltowski and Rogozinski gave "family reasons" for their resignations. Nizinski, it was admitted, gave "political reasons" for his action.

Zoltowski is known as an old-line diplomat who has served in this country under several Polish governments. Nizinski and Rogozinski also began their careers under former governments, coming here in 1946 and 1947, respectively.

Rogozinski told reporters that his decision to seek asylum here was painful, saying: "I had to do it. It is a hard thing to break with your country. Even though the government is Communist, it is still your country."

The three resignations underscored information the Embassy here has been under increasing pressure to "slant" reports home about the United States along anti-Western lines. This, it is reported, has caused considerable distress at the Embassy because a large segment of the staff is known to have hoped sincerely to achieve better United States-Polish relations.

In the past year, however, Moscow is reported to have issued instructions for the removal of all non-Communist officials in satellite governments, demanding party stalwarts as replacements. This changeover, it is pointed out, came late in most satellites because Moscow simply did not have enough trained and loyal Communists in Eastern Europe to operate all-Red regimes.

In Poland's case, the changeover was climaxed last November with the appointment of Russian-trained Marshal Konstantin Rokossowsky as commander of Polish armed forces.

Although a Pole by birth, Rokossowsky was received by most Poles as Moscow's iron servant to whom they must at least show outward fealty or be persecuted as traitors.

Underground At Work

One indication of the flimsy support the present Polish administration has from its people is the growth of underground connections with Polish citizens by such exile organizations as the Polish National Democratic Committee, the Polish Political Council and the Polish Government in Exile.

Moscow, however, has increased efforts to bind the Polish people and the Polish regime closer and closer to Russia. Most notable move in this direction was effected last June 29 when Polish Vice Premier Hilary Minc and Moscow representatives signed an eight-year trade and credits pact.

This pact, in effect, forces Poland into practically complete economic dependence on the Soviet Union. The extent of tis deal is indicated by the fact that Poland's socialized industry is to be expanded two and a half times over 1949 levels and four times above prewar levels—primarily for Russia's benefit.

3 Men Beat Up Homer Chase, Ga. Communist

Carrollton, Ga., Aug. 17 (U.P.)—Homer B. Chase, chairman of the Communist Party in Georgia, was severely beaten here today by three men, while others stood by shouting "tar and feather him" and "let's string him up."

Chase had been on the black list in these parts since leaflets signed by the Communist Party were distributed condemning a recent murder conviction of a Negro.

He and several other Georgia Communists were charged with contempt of court and Chase served nine days of a 20-day sentence before getting out on an appeal bond.

Chase showed up in town this afternoon. Three unidentified men beat him up as a crowd yelled to lynch him.

Coweta County Solicitor Wright Lipford originally petitioned the court to charge Chase with contempt for the leaflets incident. He now has petitioned Judge Samuel Boykin to revoke Chase's bond and have him rearrested on grounds that he is a "menace to the security of the United States." Boykin has set a hearing for Saturday at 10 a. m.

The leaflets appeared following the recent conviction of Clarence Henderson, a Negro, for the murder of a Georgia Tech student. The leaflets, signed by the Communist Party, called Henderson's trial a frameup.

Former Soviet Aide Indicted In A-Spy Case

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—A former Russian vice consul in New York, Anatoli H. Yakovlev, was indicted today on charges of conspiring to spy for atom-bombs secrets. He is believed to be in Russia now.

No specific overt acts by him were mentioned in the indictment handed up by a Federal grand jury, which indicted Mr. and Mrs. Julius Rosenberg of New York on the same charges.

United States Attorney Irving H. Saypol said the three conspired with Harry Gold, confessed atom spy for Russia; David Greenglass, Mrs. Rosenberg's brother, and Ruth Greenglass, David's wife.

Centered on Los Alamos

"In the main," Saypol said, the conspiracy "centered around a plot to obtain secretive and classified data and information concerning the atom-bomb project at Los Alamos, N. Mex."

The three, if convicted, are subject to the death penalty. Gold and the Greenglasses are named as co-conspirators, but not as defendants.

Rosenberg, 33, was arrested July 17, and his wife, 35, on August 11. Each is held in $100,000 bail.

The indictment charged that beginning about Nov. 1, 1944, and until as recently as last June 16 the Rosenbergs and Yakovlev, also known as "John," conspired with the Greenglasses and Gold and other persons unknown to the jury.

Exactly how the grand jury threaded the alleged plot together was not clear from the indictment. But it did charge these overt acts:

The Rosenbergs conferred with Ruth Greenglass on Nov. 15, 1944, and five days later Rosenberg gave her an undisclosed sum of money "in pursuance of said conspiracy and to effect the objects thereof." That same day Mrs. Greenglass boarded a train for New Mexico.

Received 'Paper'

On December 10, Rosenberg received from Mrs. Greenglass "a paper containing written information."

On January 5, 1945, the Rosenbergs met with the Greenglasses and Rosenberg gave Mrs. Greenglass "a portion of the side of a torn cardboard 'Jello' box." There was no further explanation in the indictment.

However, the F.B.I. announced when Rosenberg was arrested that early in 1945 he gave Greenglass one-half of an irregularly cut Jello box top. The other half, the F.B.I. said, was given to Greenglass by Gold in Albuquerque, N. Mex., as a means of identifying Gold to Greenglass.

The F.B.I. announcement said "Greenglass was paid $500 by Gold, who obtained it from his Soviet superior, Anatoli Yakovlev, vice consul of the Soviet consulate in New York City."

Old-Age Security Bill Goes to White House

By The Associated Press

Overwhelming Senate approval sent to President Truman yesterday a bill vastly expanding Social Security. It would blanket 10 million more workers under old age insurance and increase benefits up to 100 percent.

Passage was by voice vote, and no opposition voices were heard.

The legislation more than doubles Social Security payroll taxes over the next 20 years, to help pay for the bigger benefits. Payroll taxes will increase from $2,500,000,000 a year now to about $7,800,000,000 in 1970.

Old age insurance, when Mr. Truman signs the bill, will cover 45 million workers. Largest new groups to be brought into the program are five million self-employed—the grocer, the baker—plus one million domestic servants and 650,000 farm workers.

Housewives and farmers will have to pay payroll taxes for the help they employ.

About three million persons now receiving benefits—retired persons and survivors of insured persons—will get larger checks beginning October 1. The increase will average 77½ percent over present benefit payments.

The maximum benefit for a family is boosted from $85 to $150 a month. The minimum benefit for an individual is raised from $10 to $20. The average benefit for individuals now retired will jump from $26 to $46 a month.

The House approved the Social Security bill in its final compromise form, Wednesday, 374 to 1.

It includes a Senate amendment that was opposed by Mr. Truman.

The amendment restricts the Secretary of Labor's supervision of unemployment compensation funds and gives the states a larger voice in their distribution.

Even though it contains this provision and lacks some he wanted, Mr. Truman is expected to sign the bill into law. He had suggested that 20 million additional workers be brought under the program, but Congress couldn't find a way to insure that many at this time.

Jefferson Kin Plans New 'Boston Tea Party'

Boston, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—A great-great-granddaughter of Thomas Jefferson today said she was staging "another Boston Tea Party" by organizing a Nation-wide drive against "exorbitant" Government spending.

Miss Eleonora Sears, 66-year-old society woman, said the campaign would be waged by a group to be known as "the Eleonora Sears Committee," with headquarters in Boston. She said the group would maintain a powerful Washington lobby "to assert the rights of over-taxed Americans."

Senate Gets Truman Red Control Bill

By The Associated Press

President Truman's anti-Communist bill was introduced in the Senate yesterday and thereupon the Judiciary Committee whipped out a competing measure.

The committee's 9-3 vote sent to the Senate floor a sweeping bill by Chairman McCarran (D., Nev.), which would require registration of Communists and Red-front organizations. This is the Administration's main objection to the McCarran measure.

Security Uppermost

In many other respects the two proposals are similar in attempting to tighten internal security of the Nation.

Previously the committee had approved a Republican-sponsored measure of Senators Mundt (S. Dak.) and Ferguson (Mich.), for Communist controls also containing the registration feature.

A showdown on the three measures may be near since the Senate appears in a mood for passing strong legislation.

The first test may come Monday if Mundt and Ferguson go through with their attempt to tie their bill to an economic controls measure up for a vote then.

They have agreed to withdraw it if the Administration will promise a vote on the bill later.

The Administration bill, instead of Communist registration provisions, puts much emphasis on vigorous enforcement of existing laws and revision of some of them. It was introduced by nine Senators.

Court Decisions

Its sponsors said, for example, that under existing law "any person active in the Communist movement or a member of the Communist Party can be prosecuted." The sponsors added that recent court decisions had "cleared the way for successful enforcement" of such laws.

The sponsors said also that under the Natonality Act "any person can be denied citizenship who at any time within 10 years has advocated the revolutionary doctrines of the Communist movement."

McCarran's bill has the following provisions which are not in the Mundt-Ferguson bill:

1. Immigration law tightening to bar Communists, and to permit deporting or barring of diplomats suspected of being subversive.
2. Registration of all foreign-trained spies and saboteurs.
3. Permission for the Justice Department to hold for six months aliens who cannot be deported.
4. Closer liaison with the FBI on visas and passports.

Wherry Called 'Contemptible'

day to act on a UMT bill before adjourning one that could be put into effect by the President whenever he thought it was needed.

The Chief Executive, in his meeting with reporters, said that Ross had correctly and thoroughly described his own position.

"It has been said," a reporter remarked, "that your position on UMT is that you would not use it until after the Korean war even if it were voted."

Mr. Truman said again that Ross had covered the matter and that he didn't want to get into such a controversial matter.

He said he was trying to get emergency legislation from Congress, referring to his request for money and controls to deal with the Korean war and the world situation. He said he had made his position on universal military training clear in at least five messages to Congress. At this point, he summed up his position by saying that he favored universal training, always had, but didn't see any sense in cluttering up Congress with controversial matters when it already had enough controversial matters before it.

Most members of Congress appeared to think that universal training, while needed, would have to go over to the next session.

Wherry's Retort

Senator Wherry, in his reply to the President late yesterday, said that Secretary of State Acheson "paved the way" for Communist aggression in the Far East by "consistent appeasement and coddling of Russia." He said Acheson's "bungling in western Europe may prove to be equally disastrous."

"In Korea," Wherry said, "we are now reaping the whirlwind of Acheson's blunders and the President seems so confused and perplexed by the flood of events that he is blind to the devious paths down which Acheson has advised him."

Army Plane Crash Kills 4 in Crew, Two Children

San Jose, Costa Rica, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—An American C-47 transport plane crashed into a house and burned on take off here today killing its four crew members and two children.

The plane had just left the ground, with the pilot trying to gain altitude, when one of its motors failed. It crashed into an electric railroad power line, flipped into the house and burst into flames.

(In Panama City, the Caribbean Air Command confirmed the crash but said only two on the plane were killed. It said the names of the Americans would not be revealed until next of kin had been notified.)

The plane crashed into a house and burned it and another to the ground. Four occupants were seriously injured. The two children killed were playing in the street near the scene of the accident.

Bumper Crops Goal Of Brannan Again

Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan is shooting for another year of bumper farm production in 1951.

"I would rather be guilty of building up a huge surplus of agricultural products than to be blamed for a shortage of food and clothing," he told The Washington Post. "I have said that repeatedly. I am stronger than ever of that view now, in view of the critical world situation."

To accomplish his goal of plenty, no matter what the future may bring, Brannan is expected to:

1. Announce in a few days a liberal level of price supports for 1951 wheat, and later for the other so-called basic crops of corn, cotton, rice, peanuts and tobacco. The Agricultural Act of 1949 gives Brannan authority to reduce price supports this year from the present 90 percent of parity to 85 percent. Brannan is expected to keep wheat, at least, at the present 90 percent level. He doesn't have to announce support levels for the others for several months.

2. Set liberal acreage allotments on crops where he is required to announce Government goals.

Brannan already has fixed liberal acreage allotments for wheat for next year. This is 72.8 million acres, compared with 60,513,000 acres being harvested this year. (More than 18 percent of the acreage sown to wheat this year was abandoned.)

The proposed increase in wheat acreage is particularly striking for states surrounding the District of Columbia. Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia are asked to plant more wheat for 1951 harvest than ever before. Maryland is asked to plant 383,412 acres, compared with 328,000 this year and 362,000 in 1949; Virginia 508,354 acres compared with 425,000 this year and 472,000 in 1949, and West Virginia 100,943 compared with 70,000 this year and 77,000 last year.

Prospects are for a corn crop this fall only 95.8 percent of the 1949 crop. Wheat will total only 78.8 percent of last year. Oats, barley and rye are well above last year, but beans are only 84 percent, peas 64 percent and cotton less than 69 percent of 1949.

Demands of the Armed Forces will cut into supplies, so that the bases for figuring supplies is changed since last year. The law requires that Brannan base his acreage allotments for wheat, for instance, upon a total supply—carryover plus the harvest—equal to normal domestic demands, normal export demands plus 30 percent. Brannan is expected to raise that formula considerably.

War Bride Held On Kidnap Charge

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MRS. MARGARET WYRICK, 30, of Marion, Ohio, was held in $5000 bond after voluntarily returning from Toronto, Ont., with her son, 4-year-old David. She was charged with kidnaping by the Rev. and Mrs. Lester Kidd of Xenia, Ohio, the child's foster parents who legally adopted David in 1949.

Truman Blasts Senators for Roads Spending

President Truman cracked down on Congress members yesterday for proposing "excessive" nondefense spending on the Nation's highways.

The Chief Executive sent a letter to Chairman Chavez (D., N. M.), of the Senate Public Works Committee scolding the committee for approving $120,000,000 more a year for highways than the White House recommended.

Mr. Truman said it was "particularly undesirable" for the Government to encourage more road building at a time "when we are attempting to conserve manpower and materials for our defense efforts."

The President noted that the Senate legislation would authorize $620,000,000 for Federal aid to highways in each of the fiscal years 1952 and 1953, while a House- approved bill would authorize $570,000,000 for each year.

Mr. Truman said it was "essential" to trim bothe figures back to the $500,000,000 he originally recommended in his budget message.

Among other items on which he said Congress could economize, Mr. Truman cited a provision authorizing $25,000,000 for access roads leading to military establishments.

That was "excessive," Mr. Truman said. He suggested it could be cut down to $10,000,000.

The President said he has directed Federal agencies to modify their requests for nondefense needs, and said he hoped the legislators would follow suit 'in the light of the international situation and our increased defense requirements."

Mr. Truman also said he believes Federal aid funds should be limited to the Federal-aid system of highways rather than used for local or county roads that are not part of that system.

The Senate yesterday agreed to begin voting Tuesday on amendments to the highways bill and then on the bill itself.

Gallup Poll

Public Urges Curbs, But No Rationing

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 17.—A roll back of food prices to pre-Korean war levels but without consumer rationing at present, and a freezing of all prices and wages as they stood in June—this much of an economic control program for war is favored by American public opinion as reflected in surveys by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

The Economic Mobilization Bill as passed by the House would give the President discretionary power to ration and to control prices and wages. The President has said that he himself sees no need for these powers at present.

The public's vote on controls provides a striking contrast to this view.

Here is the vote of a cross-section of American voters interviewed throughout the country on the issue of price controls on four selected food items:

"Do you think the government should or should not put price controls on: Meats? Butter? Sugar? Fats and oils?"

Put Price Controls on:	Should	Should not	No opinion
Meats	74%	22%	4%
Butter	70	24	6
Sugar	73	23	4
Fats & oils	72	24	4

The principal argument advanced against controls by Washington officials is that such a move would be premature at this stage and would needlessly complicate both government operations and the national economy.

Consumer rationing books are not favored by the majority of voters interviewed in today's survey, although the size of the minority in favor is signficant.

Approval is greater among women than among men, probably because women have encountered directly some recent "panic shortages" on the shopping front.

Here is the vote:

"Do you think the government should or should not ration any of the following Meats? Butter? Sugar? Fats and oils?"

Ration:	Should	Should not	No opinion
Meats	35%	59%	6%
Butter	33	61	6
Sugar	36	58	6
Fats & oils	34	60	6

Judging by the experience of World War II, the hottest political fight so far as controls are concerned would be over wage controls if they were ever to be invoked.

The views of the general public on the issue of freezing both prices and wages are shown in the following table:

"It has been suggested that BOTH prices AND wages (salaries) should be 'frozen' (kept) at their level of June 25, the day the war in Korea started. Do you think this is a good idea or a poor idea?"

Good idea	55%
Fair	9
Poor	27
No opinion	9

2 More Strikes Set On Short Rail Lines

Union officials yesterday authorized new 5-day "token" walkouts on two American Railroads, while in Canada the threat of a general Canadian rail strike involving 124,000 men increased sharply.

President Truman told his news conference he remains hopeful a settlement can be reached that will head off a Nation-wide strike in this country.

John R. Steelman, presidential assistant, called management representatives into another conference but officials left the White House without comment.

While the management committee was in session with Steelman, the strategy committee of the two railroad brotherhoods met to plan their next move. An announcement on the next move is expected to be made Saturday.

Both routes affected by the United States strike call—set for next Tuesday at 6 a. m., EST.—are short-line railroads. However, a railway spokesman said the walkouts would strike "a crippling blow to the steel industry."

The strikes were ordered by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors against the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern Railroad, with headquarters in Chicago, and the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad, Pittsburgh.

Both are steel-carrying roads. The Pittsburgh and Lake Erie is a key line in the Pittsburgh industrial region. The Elgin-Joliet line is owned by United States Steel Corp.

Union officials said the walkouts will directly involve 5000 workers and will indirectly idle perhaps 50,000.

Similar 5-day walkouts were authorized yesterday at key terminals in Cleveland, Louisville and St. Paul, starting Monday at 6 a. m.

Tennessee Strike Closes Steel Mills, Idles 31,000

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 17 (U.P.). Steel production, including contracts resulting from the Korean war, was halted today by a strike that closed the huge Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co. mills here and idled 31,000 workers.

The company suspended operations after five locals of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO) threw up picket lines at the Fairfield and Ensley works of the United States Steel subsidiary.

Labor troubles hit Monday when the union called a strike over a job reclassification issue that would have resulted in pay raises of from 9 to 13½ cents an hour.

Meat Cutters Get Raise Of 11 Cents in Swift Pact

Chicago, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—The AFL Amalgamated Meats Cutters Union today announced the signing of a new labor contract with Swift & Co. providing an 11-cents-an-hour general wage increase.

The two-year agreement was patterned after a recent settlement of the AFL union and the CIO Packinghouse Workers Union with Armour & Co. It covered 5000 employes in 12 plants across the country.

International Harvester Walkout Is Threatened

Chicago, Aug. 17 (AP).—The United Farm Equipment Workers Division—UE, today rejected a 5-year contract proposal of the International Harvester Co. and threatened a possible strike.

The union represents about 27,000 employes in 11 Harvester plants in Auburn, N. Y.; East Moline, Ill.; Richmond, Ind.; Rock Falls, Ill.; Rock Island, Ill.; Louisville, Ky.; Canton, Ill.; and Chicago.

Duncan Sisters Face Old Income Tax Rap

Los Angeles, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—Income taxes they allegedly failed to pay a quarter of a century ago resulted today in the Federal Government suing the dancing Duncan sisters, musical comedy stars of the 1920's.

Assistant United States Attorney Paul Magasin filed an action demanding payment by Vivian Duncan of $1268.61, and by her sister, Rosetta, of $1997.69.

Magasin said that in 1942, the Government obtained a judgment against the two for taxes levied in the mid-twenties. Only a few installments were paid on the judgment, Magasin claimed.

3 Charges Cost Driver $225 Fine

Frank Smith Jones, 29, of 9706 51st pl., Hollywood, Md., was fined a total of $225 yesterday by Trial Magistrate Henry H. O'Neill on charges of manslaughter, reckless driving and operating an auto on a revoked permit.

Judge O'Neill acquitted Jones of charges of driving while drunk at the trial in Hyattsville Police Court.

Jones was operator of a car which collided with a pole at Queen's Chapel rd. and 30th st., Mount Rainier, Md., May 23. A 21-year-old Hyattsville mother of a 17-months-old son was killed in the crash. She was Mrs. Dorothy A. Hawkins, 6214 43d ave., Hyattsville. Two other persons were injured. Defense Attorney Carlyle J. Lancaster noted an appeal to the circuit court.

RFC Blames U. S. for Lustron Loan Losses

By The Associated Press

The Reconstruction Finance Corp. yesterday tossed right back into Congress' lap blame for the Government's big losses on loans to the Lustron Corp.

Lustron, a prefabricated-housing firm in Columbus, Ohio, borrowed $37,500,000 from the Government, defaulted on 36 million dollars of the loan and is in receivership. The RFC predicts losses on the loans may run to 30 million dollars.

The RFC reply was addressed specifically to Representative Cole (R., Kans.), a critic of the Lustron loans, but the RFC made it an answer also to a Senate investigating subcommittee's attack on its handling of the loans.

The Senate investigators had assailed RFC failure to detect quickly overcharges which, the report said. Lustron paid out of RFC money to the Commercial Home Equipment Co.

The RFC replied it is a lending, not a police agency.

"To conduct or participate in the conduct of commercial activity through the means and guise of loans made to business enterprise," it said ". . . would in effect constitute a sort of socialistic holding company for its (RFC's) thousands of private borrowers."

It called the Commercial Home Transaction "an improvident contract" over which RFC had no control, and emphasized it was the RFC that first branded the contract "fraudulent" in a formal report now an official record of Congress.

"It is to be assumed," the RFC said, "that your inquiry with respect to our administration of the Lustron loans may be identified . . . with a basic dissatisfaction with the lending of several million dollars of public funds to a private corporation, virtually without security, and the potential loss of most of the funds loaned.

"This dissatisfaction is shared by this corporation," the letter added, "but it must be pointed out that in making the Lustron and similar loans this corporation has complied with what it believes to be . . . the purposes and mandates of various special statutes."

The letter recalled that Congress itself enacted special laws in 1948 to permit the RFC to lend more money to Lustron and other firms.

Father's Suit Reveals Fitch Tonic 'Scandal'

Des Moines, Aug. 17 (AP).—An 80-year-old millionaire father's story of a family quarrel involving the former Fitch hair tonic and cosmetics firm was spread upon court records today.

F. W. Fitch, in a suit to remove his two sons and two sons-in-law as controlling trustees of a trust estate he set up, disclosed he had pleaded with them to resign

In a suit to have a trust company placed in charge of remaining assets of the Fitch Investment Corp., which he listed at $2,060,000 as of last May 31, the father said the Fitch company, which the trust controlled, was "a multi-million-dollar" firm in 1940.

The elder Fitch claimed the company was sold to Grove Laboratories of St. Louis in 1949 to avoid "financial failure," which he claimed was brought on by mismanagement by his sons, Lucius and Gail, and his sons-in-law, Lester R. Sandahl and Richard Young.

In a letter dated Aug. 9 and made a part of his petition, Fitch said:

"My dear boys: I hate the thought of a public scandal. You know that. Since our meeting I have hoped some of my children would come to understand that my only wish is to protect them and theirs."

The letter said Fitch could think of no way except appointment of a trust company to manage the family's affairs "because I hate to expose you." The letter added:

"We no longer have a business bringing in milions of dollars a year. There isn't the money and the income to waste and mishandle that there used to be.

"I fear my plan to provide lasting wealth for my children and my heirs is in danger, and I see my life's work likely to go for nothing."

The elder Fitch claimed that under the trust estate he set up his sons and sons-in-law elected themselves to run the Fich Co. and that between 1940 and 1945 they took $663,000 in dividends for themselves.

Fitch was born to a family of impoverished parents in the nearby town of Ogden, Iowa. He opened a barber shop in Madrid, Iowa, as a young man and with a friend's help worked out a formula for "Ideal Hair Grower and Dandruff Cure." The Nationally known Fitch firm grew from that start.

Turns Down Plea

House Group Spurns Study Of Tuna Life

The House Rules Committee thinks the sex life of the tuna fish is just fine, thank you, and doesn't need any help from Uncle Sam.

The committee yesterday tossed into the deep freeze for the rest of the session a Senate-approved bill to have the United States take part in an international investigation of the tuna's habits, along with Mexico and Costa Rica.

It seems that 95 percent of the catch is made by United States boats, but that much of the vital tuna propagation takes part in coastal waters of the two Carribbean nations.

Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.) of the House Foreign Relations Committee, asking for approval of the measure, admitted it amounted to an investigation of "the sex life of a fish."

At this, Representative E. E. Cox (D., Ga.) observed that the fish seemed to be doing all right by themselves. Representative Ray J. Madden (D., Ind.) wanted to know why the proposed commission didn't plan to do something about Wisconsin and Michigan, where, he said, "they advertise good fishing but you can't find any."

Finally Representative Clarence J. Brown (R., Ohio) noted that 95 percent of the cost would be paid by the United States—$116,000 the first year, $900,000 the second and $360,000 annually after that. He inquired:

"Why don't you do something about the suckers who pay the freight?"

Then, behind closed doors, the powerful Rules Committee decided to let the tuna have things their own way.

4 Men Burned By Carburetor Explosion

Four men were badly burned by a gasoline explosion shortly before noon yesterday at the Hessick Coal Co., 14th st. and Maine ave. sw.

After the blast, flames flared in the motor of a coal truck, and a fire alarm brought Engine Co. 13. Truck Co. 10 and Rescue Squad 1 to the scene.

Police said the explosion occurred when the men tried to pour gasoline into the truck's carburetor from a water can.

In "fair" condition at Emergency Hospital, all with second and third-degree burns of their arms and bodies, are Harry Sheetz, 41, of 2809 Buena Vista ter. se.; James A. Hill, 49, of 927 Liberty st. sw.; David McGuffie, sr., 74, of 485 Cullinane ct. sw., and John Pinkney, 55, of 490 K st. sw.

At 7:25 a.m., firemen were called to put out a blaze in the storeroom of the District Child Health Clinic, 701 Kenilworth ter. ne. Supplies of soap, towels and bandages were slightly damaged.

Woman Visitor Yoked, Police Grab Suspect

A Richmond, Va., couple who drove to Washington to watch the Nats play the Yankees yesterday at Griffith Stadium encountered the wrong sort of hospitality at 4 a. m.

A man grabbed Mrs. Susie Huband, 52, about the neck as she and her husband were walking in front of Child's Restaurant, 10 Massachusetts ave. nw.

He snatched her purse, which contained $32 and several checks, and escaped through an alley in rear of 17 Massachusetts ave nw.

The victim's husband, Arthur Lee Huband, a semi-pro baseball umpire in Richmond and manager of the Greyhound bus terminal there, chased the yoker for about a block but was outdistanced.

Mrs. Huband described her attacker as a Negro between 20 and 25, clad in a maroon sport jacket, red baseball cap and khaki pants. Within 15 minutes, First Precinct police picked up Calvin R. Holliday, 18, of 12 G st. nw., in the general area of the robbery and said he answered the description.

Holliday protested he was innocent. Police said Mrs. Huband, after treatment for cuts and shock at Casualty Hospital, identified him as her assailant.

Arlingtonian Charged With Embezzlement

The treasurer of an Arlington electrical firm was accused yesterday of embezzling an estimated $6500 from his employer over a two-year period.

Police booked Philip J. Sharkey, 40, 813 S. Fillmore st., treasurer of the Jack Stone Electrical Co., on a charge of grand larceny alleged in a warrant sworn out by officials of the firm. He was jailed in lieu of $5000 bond pending a hearing in Arlington County Court at an unspecified date.

According to the commonwealths attorney's office, Sharkey gave a signed statement in which he admitted taking "various amounts" of company funds in the last two years. Detectives said the peculations followed a "regular pattern" amounting to about $300 a month during that time.

'Lonely Hearts' Operator Held

GEORGE H. ASHLEY, 52, operator of a Los Angeles, Calif., lonely hearts club was arrested yesterday in a Long Beach motel on charges of swindling women of $200,000 through his club. He has been sought since April 17 on 23 counts of criminal conspiracy and 31 counts of grand theft. Headquarters of Ashley's "Life's Estate, Inc." in Hollywood were raided in April. Prosecutors claim he ran advertisements of lonely hearts or matrimonial bureau nature, then induced women to turn over their property to him

Riviera Raffles Gets $47,000 Gems in Haul

Nice, France, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—Police disclosed another big French jewel robbery today, only a few hours after they questioned Fashion Designer Elsa Schiaparelli regarding possession of gems alleged to have been taken from her in a previous theft.

Police said $47,000 worth of jewels were stolen from a villa near Cannes in the third large-scale theft in two weeks along the swank Riviera coast. Reports that a handsome man—a "Raffles" type—may have been responsible for all three crimes stunned the international set in this world famous playground.

The latest jewels taken belonged to Mme. Jeanne d'Arraujo, prominent Cannes and Paris socialite. She was not at her villa when the theft occurred.

Mme. Schiaparelli was at the villa Le Roc of American socialite Norman Winston after police halted her yesterday at the Nice airport as she was leaving for Tunis, They questioned her for more than three hours about three pieces of jewelry on her person, which she had reported missing earlier in an $85,000 gem robbery at the Winston villa.

Police said they found $1485 on her person that she had not declared to customs officials. The money was confiscated, and she paid a customs fine.

Police reopened their investigation of the Winston robbery. It was learned that the thieves did not take all the jewels that were in upstairs rooms. Among those untouched was a huge diamond from the crown of Persia that had arrived at the villa only two days before the theft.

3 Nominees Approved

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday approved three new members of the International Claims Commission. The nominations must be confirmed by the Senate. They are Roy G. Baker, of Texas; Raymond S. McKeough, of Illinois, and Josiah Marvel, jr., of Delaware.

Chest Goal

It is an old principle of fund raising that, within reasonable limits of actual need, the higher your goal the more money you are likely to raise. Indeed, that has been the experience of Community Chests over the country as recounted last week at the Adirondack Workshop at Lake George. Hence it is disheartening to have the Community Chest Federation of Metropolitan Washington consciously setting its sights below the recognized needs of Chest agencies. Although the requirements of Chest members in the Washington area are acknowledged to be near five million dollars, the forthcoming campaign goal has been fixed at $4,100,000 because "we must be realistic."

Washington last year experienced a fifth successive failure to reach the Community Chest goal—it fell short of the approximate four-million-dollar objective by more than $400,000. Maybe it is realistic, in light of this experience, to say that the metropolitan community could not be expected to raise five million dollars this year. But last year's goal, too, was set below stated needs. The effect of another campaign in which needs are undercut will be to increase the tendency of agencies to go outside the Chest with separate financial drives which are the bane of the Chest principle. Certainly, if the agencies don't get the money they need, something is going to suffer—and there is little encouragement for other agencies to join the Chest in a single appeal. If the goal were set higher, commensurate with real needs, and extra emphasis were placed on payroll deductions, certainly nothing would be lost, and psychologically contributors might be persuaded to think in larger terms.

Recapturing Profits

Senator Robertson estimates that the Government recaptured more than 10 billion dollars of excess profits during World War II through renegotiation of contracts and saved an even larger amount of money through the repricing of war materials brought about by renegotiation of contracts. At present the only contracts subject to renegotiation are those covering procurement of airplanes and parts. Since the expanded military program will result in a tremendous increase in buying not only of aircraft but of a wide range of products and materials, a comprehensive renegotiation system is again required to prevent the profits of war contractors from soaring at Government expense.

The Ways and Means Committee has just concluded hearings on a bill of this sort providing for the renegotiation of all contracts and subcontracts entered into by the armed services and the General Services Administration, and empowering the President, at his discretion, to extend the provisions of the bill to other Government procurement agencies. A six-man board would be set up to administer the law, consisting of an officer or employe of the Army, of the Navy, and of the Air Force, appointed by the respective departmental heads and an officer or employe of the General Services Administration appointed by the administrator. The two other members would be presidential appointees representing other Government agencies.

Senator Robertson is critical of the composition of the board—with good reason, in our opinion. Procurement officials, he explains, are primarily concerned to get results quickly, and cost with them is usually a secondary consideration. Although their advice and cooperation are a requisite of good administration, he concludes, therefore, that authority ought to be vested in the chairman of the board, who should be appointed by the President, with the other members acting only in an advisory capacity. In other respects, however, the pending measure affords the Government much needed protection against the abuses that would result from the placement of orders for billions of dollars of war materials and equipment with contractors who often are unable to determine in advance what production costs will be.

Under present conditions, even in the absence of deliberate profiteering, cost estimates are likely to be inflated, despite protestations to the contrary of spokesmen for various groups who appeared before the Ways and Means Committee and argued that their products were standard items that should be exempt from renegotiation, as under the World War II renegotiation law. However, even in case of standard products, unit production costs and profits are affected by the volume of sales. As a result, there is no justification for exempting any group from coverage, especially as the bill gives the administrative board discretionary authority to exempt any class or type of contract.

The pending measure would not only enable the Government to recapture excessive profits, it would check a rise in prices stimulated by the lure of excessive profits. A comprehensive renegotiation law would, in short, save money directly and indirectly for the Government, and at the same time help to keep down the prices of a wide range of goods and services that affect general living costs. The importance of quick action is obvious.

Wherry's Mischief

Senator Wherry has indulged in an ugly piece of political trickery in reiterating the canard that only $200 worth of wire was sent to Korea under the 1950 military assistance authorization. Senator Tydings did his best to set the record straight, but the facts made little dent on the Nebraska Senator, whose main objective is to twist the story so that, by some strange indirection, he can place the blame for "the blood of our boys in Korea" on Secretary Acheson.

Mr. Wherry's trick is one of distortion by omission. It is literally true that the only obligation or charge against the 10-million-dollar military aid authorization was $200 for signal wire. But that $200 was merely the cost of rehabilitating some $52,000 worth of military materiel, in the category of excess equipment, that was actually on the boat headed for Korea by the end of June. The charges against the authorization thus had nothing to do with the supplies actually in transit. Other equipment valued at $300,000 was on its way to American ports at the close of the fiscal year. Practically all the remainder of the 10 million dollars had been obligated in new procurement, primarily for spare parts for equipment the Koreans already had. Moreover, under another provision of the military assistance program, the Koreans in fiscal 1950 purchased approximately $250,000 worth of naval supplies.

What Mr. Wherry completely overlooks, deliberately or otherwise, is the time factor. Before equipment could legally be sent to Korea under the aid program, it was necessary to conclude a bilateral agreement. That was not signed by Korea until late winter. After that it was necessary to start rehabilitation of available excess equipment in many depots, and to take bids and let contracts for new equipment. To have furnished aid at Wherry speed would have meant either disobeying the law or stripping American forces.

Aid arranged during fiscal 1950, of course, was only a small part of the aid Korea has received from the United States since the war. Senator Tydings put the total military and economic assistance since 1946 at 495 million dollars. Military equipment worth 56 million dollars was left when American troops withdrew. Korea received 49,000 carbines, 42,000 rifles, 43,000 rockets, 170,000 grenades, 25 minesweepers, bazookas and other equipment at that time; 15,000 more rifles were sent her last year. In addition, she received 85 million dollars worth of other surplus supplies such as tractors, much of it of semimilitary use.

Most of this equipment, to be sure, was intended to enable the Koreans merely to maintain internal security and repel border raids, and this is what seems to grieve Mr. Wherry. The South Koreans were not given heavier equipment for the very good reason that there was no assurance that they would not provoke a war. President Rhee himself, in October, 1949, was quoted as saying "I am sure that we could take Pyongyang, the northern capital, in three days." For a United Nations-sponsored regime to have undertaken aggression with American arms would have been a very serious matter indeed.

The salient point is that, apart from the element of tactical surprise the Communist aggressors achieved through months of massing and withdrawing along the border, there was no feasible way to arm the South Koreans to withstand the kind of onslaught that came. It would have cost hundreds of millions of dollars, as the expense of the American campaign now proves, and Senator Wherry presumably would have been among the first to object to it. The kind of cheap inquest the Nebraskan is now conducting has no purpose other than politics, and it does no credit either to him or to those who have joined in the mischief.

Liberator

Jose de San Martin, the centennial of whose death was observed Thursday, was a great figure in the history of three South American nations. Argentina, Chile and Peru revere him as the father of their independence from Spain, and President Truman has properly honored him for his service to liberty. After participating in the liberation of Buenos Aires, San Martin joined forces with the famed Bernardo O'Higgins in freeing Chile in 1817-18, promptly turning the government over to O'Higgins. In 1821 he entered Lima and was proclaimed protector of Peru. Royalist opposition and jealousy, plus rivalry with Simon Bolivar to the north, made his position difficult, however, and in 1824 he retired to private life. Finding it impossible to live unmolested in South America, he withdrew to Europe and died an impoverished exile in 1850. Like Jose Artigas of Uruguay, he was a military statesman beyond personal ambition, whose devotion to the cause of freedom came to be appreciated only after his death.

We join with our South American neighbors in celebrating the historic role of San Martin. There is a great difference, however, between the kind of sincere veneration due such a statesman and the kind of maudlin carnival which the Peron government of Argentina has been conducting. Peron has required that the phrase "Year of the Liberator" be used as a greeting, in a manner almost reminiscent of "Heil Hitler"; he has even gone to the point of closing newspapers which failed to print the emblem. Peron's objective is clear: he would like to identify himself as a modern San Martin. Merely to suggest any similarity between the two is a travesty on history.

The Rhubarbarians

Upon the agenda this morning we find the interesting but rather troublesome question of whether our national game of baseball is (as some believe) a great character-building institution or (as others think) a subtle means of inculcating our youth with the notion that anything goes, if you can get away with it.

Last week, you recall, Mr. Durocher's New York Giants, who since about mid-July have been just about burning up the National League, were playing a series in Boston. In one of the games Mr. Bob Elliott, the Braves' third baseman, came to bat, and, finding that his vision was somewhat obscured by an umpire standing directly behind second base, politely requested him to move. The umpire did so, but his place was immediately taken by the Giants' second baseman, Mr. Stinky Stanky, who began a series of gyrations designed to distract Mr. Elliott's eye from the ball. Mr. Elliott did not relish this performance, and indeed protested bitterly, as did his manager, Mr. Southworth; Mr. Andy Seminick, catcher for the Philadelphia club, liked it even less when Mr. Stanky tried it on him after the Giants had moved down to Shibe Park for another series. Mr. Seminick's club is currently at the head of the league, determined to remain there for the rest of the season, and thus in no mood to be tolerant.

It was something of a poser for the umpires. There is nothing in the letter of the rules which forbids a second baseman to behave as Mr. Stanky behaved. Yet it seems plainly contrary to the intent of the rules, which not only place rigid limitations on the movements permitted to pitchers, but also forbid them to "wear a garment with ragged, frayed or slit sleeves," or to "attach tape or other material of a color different from the uniform or glove" in the hope of confusing the batter. The chief umpire, therefore, appealed to Mr. Durocher, in the interests of peace and sportsmanship, to persuade Mr. Stanky to desist. Mr. Durocher rather grudgingly promised he would do so.

However, when Mr. Seminick came to bat in the second inning of Saturday's game, Mr. Stanky repeated his performance; although he broke it off when the pitcher placed his foot on the slab. This may or may not have been the reason why Mr. Seminick in running into third base crashed with full force into the Giants' third baseman, Mr. Thompson, who was waiting for a throw, and knocked him out cold. Mr. Seminick went home to score, and as it turned out, his run was decisive. When Mr. Seminick came up another time, Mr. Stanky went at it again. The bat suddenly flew out of Mr. Seminick's hands and across the infield in the direction of his tormentor. At this point the base umpire, Mr. Lon Warneke, thought that matters would be best served by putting Mr. Stanky out of the game. Mr. Durocher was very angry, and announced that the rest of the game would be played under protest.

Mr. Seminick, when he came up for the third time, got on base by an infield error. The batter who followed him hit into a fielder's choice at second base. Mr. Seminick went into the base with his spikes aimed high at Mr. Stanky's successor, Mr. Rigney. When the dust cleared the two were seen exchanging hearty punches, whereupon players from both benches swarmed out into the field. The mood of riot spread through the stands, where some partisans of the Giants are said to have been vigorously pelted by the native zealots with partly consumed hot dog and mustard sandwiches. Presently a large detail of police managed to restore a sort of order; Messrs. Seminick and Rigney were ejected from the field, and the game went on and on into eleven innings.

On Sunday Mr. Ford Frick, president of the league, announced that Mr. Durocher's protest had not been allowed; also, that if there isn't any rule forbidding players to do what Mr. Stanky did, there soon will be one. Meanwhile, Mr. Southworth of the Braves and Mr. Sawyer of the Phillies have joined voices to deplore the lack of sportsmanship exhibited by Mr. Durocher's club. Mr. Durocher's attitude has been reported as follows:

And there you have it. In defense of Mr. Durocher's position it might be said that the winning of ball games usually marks up bigger figures in the box office reports than sportsmanship does. To be sure, the game as played by the Messrs. Durocher, Stanky and Seminick isn't exactly cricket; but there are moments when it has a considerable resemblance to the game of international diplomacy or to a session of the United Nations Security Council.

HANGING THE DOOR

A door is like a wall, but not a wall,
To say what shall be held, and what held back.
Let it swing readily, though not to all.
Let it stand wide, or never show a crack.
To set the limits is an act of mind;
To keep them movable, an act of will.
Let it be strong and balanced, and designed
For comfort at the jamb and latch and sill.

Now out of hillside timbers, iron and lime
We have wrought shape and substance to a place,
We have let out a bucket into time
And hauled to earth a cottageful of space.
Eternity has roof and walls and floor
And—for the freedom that we love—a door!

European Production

The European signatories of the Atlantic Pact insist that all member countries, and particularly the United States, should pool their financial resources for the defense of western Europe.

It is vital that we should have clear ideas on this subject if we wish to avoid burdening our own economic and financial system to the breaking point. What does pooling of financial resources mean? It cannot mean anything else than the right to draw on the production of the various countries which have signed the Atlantic Pact. If the respective countries only increase their budgets and monetary expenditures for armaments, the result will be more inflation and deterioration of currencies.

I submit that even before the mischievous attack in Korea most of the European countries were still suffering from either inflationary pressures (controlled or not) or budgetary deficits or both. If we really mean the pooling of our resources the first thing we should ask from the European countries is that they should increase their production and if possible their productivity. The increase of productivity is a long-term and slow process. Production, however, can be increased considerably by working 48 hours instead of 40 hours at regular pay. I therefore submit that the increase in hours of work is the first test of the spirit of cooperation.

Be it said in passing, there is also another test as to the readiness of the European countries to defend themselves. If they are really willing to fight for their defense then they should outlaw communism as a legal political party. It never made sense to me that the democracies permitted, in the name of liberty, the legal existence of political organizations whose main purpose is the destruction of a society which permits them to organize freely.

Interracial Workshop

Recently a group of college students and other young people left Washington to return to their homes in Iowa, Florida, New York and other States. They departed without having received either the thanks of our good city that they had come, nor its apology for treatment unworthy of a good host.

Washington owes an apology to the members of the Workshop who believed that our local stations really meant it when they blared forth, "Freedom is everybody's job. What are you doing?" These members of a movement which has as its keystone a discipline of nonviolence soon found that they, coming for a serious purpose, were to be given only a cot in the District Jail—charged with disorderly conduct—for the crime of standing in line at a public restaurant.

Obviously, compared with the means used by revolutionaries, the peaceful, but firm, attempt by workshoppers to prevail upon a fickle-minded cafeteria owner to serve their interracial group constitued no disorder. It is naturally for an Appeals Court to render a final decision, but meanwhile the contention of that court that "taking the law into their own hands" cannot go unchallenged.

As a regular patron of the Sholl's Cafeteria where the Workshop group were denied service, I have been somewhat puzzled as to why the group were not served. On July 11, six days prior to this incident, I talked to Mr. McGarrahy, the owner, concerning the serving of several Negro Boy Scouts from Troop 124, Los Angeles, whom I had seen eating together with their troopmates in Thompson's Cafeteria at 14th & New York. He replied that he too had voluntarily served Negro boys who were members of the two groups patronizing his cafe the previous week. How is it then, that one day a Negro or two among a group could be served, but that the Workshop group could not be served?

As we might expect in the year 1950, some persons have been readily encouraged to pin a "red label" on the Workshop group. Those who have followed the story of the Interracial Workshop in Washington since 1947 know that its tactics rule out the use of force, hate and vituperation, and that far from "stirring up trouble" the Workshops have provided participants with valuable and constructive experience in the technique of peaceful evolution of social conditions to correct inequalities and right injustices.

Laughs In The U. N.

We need a funny man in the United Nations and I nominate Fred Allen to represent us as an alternate delegate.

The Communists lie just as unblushingly as the Nazis used to do. The free world knows that North Korea, at the instigation of Russia, attacked South Korea. What is the Communist story? That America started the whole mess.

Now an honest man faced with a liar naturally boils with anger and that is one of the very results the liar wants to produce. Why not turn the tables on the lying Communists and have the whole world laugh at them? Fred Allen is the man for the job.

As an expert at making up corking jokes on the spur of the moment, he could do the world great good by following the lying Malik at a meeting of the Security Council of the U.N. The laughter he would set off would ripple out in giant waves to all corners of the earth. Give that treatment to Malik and any other Communist liar and before long their sense of shame would be restored to them and never again would they dare to tell an audience of free men the monstrosities they have spawned.

Disillusionment Of The Liberals

NOT QUITE ELEVEN years ago the Nazis launched their assault upon Poland, and England, unprepared for war after the years of pacifism and appeasement, took up the unequal contest with Germany. In his recent book The Gathering Storm Winston Churchill, who long had been a Cassandra on the subject of Britain's weakness in the face of the rising German menace, describes his feelings on that occasion in the following words: "I felt a serenity of mind and was conscious of a kind of uplifted detachment from human and personal affairs. The glory of Old England, peace-loving and ill-prepared as she was, but instant and fearless at the call of honour, thrilled my being and seemed to lift our fate to those spheres removed from earthly facts and physical sensation."

Mr. Stewart Alsop cited in his column of August 7, the remarks of Mr. Churchill in the House of Commons depicting the present naked defenselessness of England and western Europe in the advancing shadow of the Soviet Union. By contrast with his feelings upon the outbreak of World War II, the sentiments expressed by Mr. Churchill the other day seem gloomy and full of foreboding.

However there is perhaps one hopeful side to the present dark picture. Although no one can view without dread the reappearance of global war; nevertheless, with the Korean conflict one can now hope that the scales will fall from the eyes of those who these five years past since 1945 have talked appeasement and peace (two contradictories!), and the enemy in all the evil of his real self will stand exposed to the Western world.

For those members of the liberal camp who from the start regarded communism as a sort of "Red Fascism," the awakening of their more doctrinaire friends of the Left has been painfully slow. Five years ago with the Russians in possession of Eastern and Central Europe, the disturbing stories of terrorism began coming through with increasing frequency. The melancholy episode of the DPs and their forced repatriation into slavery or death behind the Iron Curtain outraged the few who took notice. The disclosures of Communist truculence toward their American "allies" warned that the real Soviet intention was to push us out of Europe.

While America hastily demobilized her armies, leaving but a corporal's guard in Germany, disturbing reports came out of the Eastern Zone about the formation by the Soviets of an army recruited from former Nazi ranks. Diligently carrying out the reparations agreements, the Allies permitted whole industrial plants to be shipped eastward, while the ragged Russian Bear ransacked his newly acquired territories for provisions and for the tools of war. An estimated 12 million men, women, and children of German ethnic origin were driven westward into an overcrowded Allied Zone.

Meanwhile the Soviet did not hesitate to play politics with relief. Private relief efforts from outside the Iron Curtain were excluded, and the local commissars could now use bread as well as guns to cow the people. In this country doctrinaire journals of the Left promoted for the most part "antifascist" relief. While the United States paid the bill for UNRRA almost in its entirety, the wily Soviet Union at one and the same time as an UNRRA member took credit for generosity and herself received assistance!

The five years of increasing revelations of Soviet ruthlessness, the millions of slave laborers forever locked in the Russian fastnesses, the new sciences of terror and of torture, the fifth column seizures of power in the small countries of eastern and central Europe—have, it is hoped, given pause for thought to many of those liberals who during the immediate postwar days could talk only of action against such Lilliputian tyrants as Peron and Franco (see The Nation), and of "understanding" the misunderstood Soviet Union.

Let us resolve in the future to regard all tyrannies, of the Left as well as of the Right, with the same steady gaze of skepticism, and even of contempt, that characterized the attitude of Mr. Winston Churchill toward Franco, and Stalin, even though the exigencies of war, as we have seen, sometimes throw together the wicked and the just in strange alliances against a common foe.

Democrats Under Fire

By Marquis Childs

Politics Over Korea

DEMOCRATS in Congress up for reelection are rapidly realizing the cruel dilemma they face in the campaign this fall. They must support at least tacitly the policies of their party. Yet those policies, whether as a deliberate consequence or by accident is unimportant, have resulted in a war for which this country was in no way prepared.

The reverses have caused widespread anger and dismay. This is true even though the holding operation by American forces, judged by objective military observers, has been executed with skill. In view of the heavy balance in favor of the Reds it has been remarkably successful.

The conflict in Korea is the kind of limited war that the American public finds it difficult to rationalize or even to understand. The evidence is growing, particularly as reflected in letters to Congressmen, that the Korean war has produced great confusion and uncertainty.

To begin with, it is difficult to personalize the struggle. There is no Kaiser, no Hitler. Stalin is a distant figure who talks about peace.

The fight is against an abstraction called communism. For far too many people, both here and abroad, this abstraction seems to mean little when it comes to the blood, sweat and tears of sacrifice. They ask in letters coming in increasing numbers why American boys are fighting in a distant land, and why taxes are going to have to be increased so drastically.

* * *

ALL THIS was focused in the statement of the Republicans on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. of Massachusetts has now explained that this was not intended as an attack on the Democrats, but as a constructive approach to preparedness to meet the menace of communism everywhere.

Lodge and Senator H. Alexander Smith of New Jersey may have intended the statement that way. But Senators Bourke B. Hickenlooper and Alexander Wiley, the other signers, both up for reelection, were certainly not blind to the political meaning of the document.

The Republican policy statement, which drew angry replies from Democrats on the Foreign Relations Committee, suggests the wide range of the Republican attack in the fall. Senators like Lodge and Smith, who have supported the bipartisan foreign policy in the past, will inveigh against diplomatic and military failures of the past, at the same time that they demand more sacrifices and greater urgency in preparing to meet the attack of communism.

At the other extreme of republicanism, Senators of the stamp of William E. Jenner of Indiana and George Malone of Nevada will denounce the war itself and American involvement in it. They will not hesitate to use the crudest isolationist and America-first appeals. Even a Republican hopeful so far out of the political picture as Harold E. Stassen, president of the University of Pennsylvania, has come out in a radio address accusing the Administration of being "one of the most incompetent in our Nation's lifetime."

* * *

THUS, from both flanks the Democrats will be under fire. How to answer this fire without sounding merely negative and defensive is yet to be solved.

Perhaps the greatest handicap the Democrats suffer under is the fact that domestic issues are pretty much eclipsed. And it was on domestic issues that the Democratic high command had relied to get the labor vote in an off-year election. Without a turnout approaching that of the presidential year of 1948, when a little more than half the eligible voters cast their ballots, the Democrats will be in trouble.

An interesting illustration is Connecticut. Gov. Chester Bowles won over his Republican opponent in '48 by a handful of votes. During his brief term he has vigorously pushed reforms in government and education. But now the Republicans have named Representative John Davis Lodge (Henry Cabot's brother) to run against him; Lodge can dwell on his specialty which is the failure of American policy in the Far East. While this won't have much relation to what is happening in Connecticut, the voters will be likely to listen.

The obvious mistakes and failures of an Administration long in power stand out glaringly at this time of crisis. Realizing the awesome nature of this crisis, we can only hope that the division over the war will not go too deep. Yet politics in a political year is politics in spite of anything.

Who's To Blame?

I wish to commend you upon your publication on your editorial page of August 16 of the cartoon by Herblock—"Unusual Politics"—the column by Malvina Lindsay and editorial "After Five Years." There has been entirely too much infantile yelling lately that the Administration is to blame for the situation this country is facing.

Too many Senators are shirking their duties and endeavoring to make the public forget their isolationism when our President was pleading for more money for military protection, the "Voice" and other vital legislation, by beating their own drums and blowing their own horns, instead of supporting our Administration in its need.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

Business-As-Usual War

WITH UNITED STATES FORCES IN KOREA.—Our thin lines here in Korea are held by increasingly exhausted troops, whose customary rest is a few moments of troubled sleep in a ditch or foxhole.

When these men attack, their first task is to scale precipitous mountain heights in blazing heat under enemy fire. And when they are attacked, which is more usual, it is by a seemingly omnipresent enemy skilled in mountain fighting, fatalistically tenacious and vastly more numerous.

Add to that the want of reserves, which makes it necessary to keep even the worst-mauled divisions in the line indefinitely, with almost no relief. It may then be understood why this Korean fighting is as cruel and disheartening as any that American troops have known, despite our improving ground fire power and complete air supremacy. And it is then also understandable why anyone who has been with these Americans at the front, grows bitterly indignant at the all too visible signs of business-as-usual in the rear areas.

* * *

THESE unpleasing hints of continuing complacency and political-mindedness take two well-defined forms. First, things are not being done that obviously ought to be done—almost all our huge transpacific air transport and ocean cargo capacity is still given over to profitable commerce and a luxurious tourist trade, while reinforcements and supplies are long and breathlessly awaited in Korea.

Second, and almost worse, the real gravity of the situation here in Korea is still being elaborately concealed from our people at home—the dreadful toll of the fighting is being hidden, for example, by greatly delaying announcement of totals of known dead, missing and wounded.

Nor is this all. In two previous reports in this space, the hard fighting on the Chinju approaches, the first American offensive action in Korea, has been described at some length. While well conducted as an exercise, it must now be added that in the outcome this tough and painful American effort seems to have served no visible military purpose whatever.

At heavy cost, our men fought their way forward. They had hardly reached their objective on the heights above Chinju when they were recalled again, and with bitter anger retraced their steps to the same positions where they had jumped off.

* * *

WHEN ALL the facts are known, this maneuver will seem an imitation of the "good old Duke of York who had 10,000 men, who marched them up the hill and marched them down again." In other circumstances, we might have afforded a sally to probe the enemy's reaction, even at considerable cost. But in this case the potential reserves that were so desperately needed to bolster our thin line were gravely impaired in value. Little was added to the security of our main Korean harbor, Pusan (although this excuse will also be offered) since our actual defensive position is now almost exactly the same as it was before. Meanwhile we lost the immediately valuable Pohang airstrip at the other end of the beachhead.

And in the face of these facts, one of the highest possible authorities has frankly admitted that the real motive of the fighting on the Chinju approaches was that we "needed a victory."

In brief, in the area involved, the North Koreans had only their somewhat understrength Sixth Division, with limited artillery, almost no armor and no air support at all. In contrast, besides many tanks and powerful air support, it has already been published that we had in this fighting the First Marine Brigade and the Fifth, Thirty-fifth and Twenty-fourth Regimental Combat Teams, with all their many attached units.

* * *

WE ENJOYED, therefore, a manpower superiority of at least 1 1/3 to 1; a superiority in tank and artillery firepower of at least 4 and perhaps 5 to 1; an estimable advantage in a strong, wholly unopposed air effort, and an incomputable superiority in transport and supply. In interpreting these facts, special allowances must be made for certain special circumstances, such as the absolute greenness of some of the key American outfits involved. Yet what still stands out is the great weight we had to muster in order to overwhelm one division of the enemy.

With 15 divisions now in the field, the North Koreans are more likely to take heart than lose heart from their Chinju defeat. Of course, we may reasonably expect that our continuing air effort will eventually dry up the supply of all the North Korean forces, gradually starving them of ammunition and other necessities. Of course, this attrition of North Korean strength will ultimately make the problem here much more manageable.

But the facts still remain: this is a very big job. We have not enough strength here, even now, to be sure of avoiding a fearful catastrophe in the rather near future. Even after we have passed the crisis, we are going to need vastly more strength to get this job done in a reasonable time. And it is downright treasonable to try to do the job on the basis of business-as-usual, politics-as-usual and the usual doses of poisoned soothing syrup for the American people.

Hughes' Wire Tapped Here, Shimon Aide Testifies

McHale was one of three witnesses.

Attorney Silent

Shimon's attorney, Robert E. Lynch, heard yesterday's testimony and would not comment.

In another development, Committee Counsel Gerhard P. Van Arkel conferred with James Knapp and Lafayette E. Broome, Justice Department attorneys who presented to the Federal grand jury the evidence on the wire tapping of Hughes' phones. The grand jury did not indict by the end, last Friday, of the three-year period fixed by the statute of limitations. The conference was a prelude to a formal request by Chairman Pepper for FBI reports and income tax information gathered by Justice Department in the wire-tapping probe.

It was also disclosed that a man identified as the person who shadowed Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) in 1947 has gone to Mexico City. Brewster headed the War Investigating Committee that probed the Hughes' contracts. He has told reporters he paid Shimon $100 to $125 for expenses of investigating the "shadow."

The hearing put on the public record highlights of police and other testimony previously given in closed hearings to the sepcial investigating committee headed by Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.).

Besides the hearing, these were among yesterday's key developments in the wire tapping probe:

1. High Justice Department officials and Senate Democrats took special pains to make clear their belief that Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) had no connection with any of the alleged wire tapping. Ferguson had issued a complete denial of any such connection. He headed the subcommittee which heard Hughes. Senator Brewster, who headed the full committee, has similarly denied knowledge of wire tapping, and has been careful to point out that Senator Ferguson headed the subcommittee.

Ferguson's name did not come into the hearing yesterday. McHale told the committee he heard a telephone call over the tapped line at the Mayflower from Noah F. Dietrich, vice president of the Hughes Tool Co., to Senator Ferguson at the latter's home. The tap was on the Hughes suite in the Mayflower. McHale said he heard Dietrich ask Ferguson for a conference. He said he heard Ferguson tell Dietrich he would have such a conference only before the full Senate War Investigating Committee.

Chairman Pepper said that in the material so far found, that was the only connection in which Ferguson was mentioned. Senate District Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) commented he thought Ferguson's reply to Dietrich was very proper. Justice officials disclosed they felt Ferguson deserved to be cleared of any thought of a connection with the wire tapping.

2. Representative W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.) expressed complete amazement that Lieut. Shimon had bought three new automobiles from a single Washington firm during the time Shimon, by assignment of Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, was assigned to aid the investigations being conducted by a House committee headed by Macy. This was in 1948.

Black Market Probe

Macy's probe of the Washington auto black market here was the highlight of the investigations.

According to information in the hands of the Macy Committee in 1948, Shimon bought the cars listed below during the seven-month period covered by the Macy auto probe. The period was January 1 through July 31, 1948. The information available to the Macy Committee showed Shimon bought three cars from the McKee Pontiac firm. Shimon, at the time was in the used car business as head of the Calvert Motors, Inc., in Arlington. He has since sold his share of the business according to Pepper.

The 1948 purchases were (1) on February 10, 1948, a four-door Pontiac sedan for $2255.15, of which $320.15 was for accessories; on April 13, a de luxe four-door sedan for $2034.55, of which $146.55 was for extras, and on July 26, a de luxe convertible coupe for $2678.35, of which $538.35 was for accessories.

In connection with this phase, Lynch, Shimon's attorney, commented, "But this doesn't point out that it was not against the law to buy cars in 1948. Lieutenant Shimon was in the auto business and obviously he was buying the cars for some business purpose. These were perfectly normal transactions, such as were carried on by hundred's of other dealers."

Recorded Day by Day

The purchases were recorded in the McKee firm's list of new car sals day by day for the seven-month period. Similar lists were obtained from numerous other Washington firms. Macy said he never saw the lists. General Accounting Office investigators were assigned to comb the lists for certain information, but the information sought was for the purpose of showing unusual transactions. There was no effort to check individuals for their purchasers. Neither was any investigation made of auto purchases by police.

The information was passed on with other Macy committee records into the House files.

Shimon's being in the used car business was then known to Macy's aides and in fact he was understood to have been asked casually for any advice he might have.

Macy gave Shimon a general commendation for service to the committee. This was done in May, 1948, and was described as a gesture of courtesy rather than a reward for specific services. The auto hearings came in November and December, just before the Macy committee was terminated, with the ending of the 80th Congress.

Police Precinct Det. James G. Bryant, first witness in yesterday's public hearing, also told of 1947 wire tapping. Like McHale, he was an assistant to Shimon while Shimon was special investigator for United States Attorney George Morris Fay.

He said Shimon in 1947 took him to the Carlton Hotel and had him listen on both a telephone tap and a microphone under the door to a room which Shimon said the advance men for Howard Hughes were to occupy. He said Shimon told him he was doing it for "a" or "the" Senate committee, and that Fay was aware of what was being done. Later developments convinced Bryant, the officer testified, that Fay did not know what was being done.

He said he listened from about 6 p. m. to midnight at the Carlton, but no one showed up. He said they moved next to the Mayflower.

Headpiece Installed

In a room there, Bryant testified, Shimon went to a telephone box, installed a headpiece and "told me I was to listen in and take down all of the conversations I could."

Bryant said he did. He recalled he later found out the room was occupied by Dietrich, and by Thomas Slack, an attorney for Hughes. He said he remembered hearing Hughes call in, start to say where he was, and being told by either Dietrich or Slack that they didn't want to know then where he was because they had told the committee they didn't know.

He said he always gave Shimon both his longhand and typed notes and that he listened in four or five times.

Bryant said his suspicions about the official nature of the wire-tapping were aroused when he and Sergt. George H. Robison walked through the lobby of the Mayflower and saw a friend of Shimon's, "Bill" Nolan, hide behind a newspaper. William Nolan, former partner of Shimon's in the used car business, has been a witness in closed hearings of the Pepper group.

When he saw Nolan duck behind the newspaper, said Bryant, "Robison and I became very angry, we felt Shimon had Nolan spying on us. I did not like it at all." He said that was when he became convinced Fay did not know of the probe. He testified he raised the question by phone with Shimon, that Shimon slammed down the phone, and thereafter always acted as though nothing had happened.

In 1944 after breaking the famous Kent Jewel robbery case, Shimon told reporters it was the "natural reactions" of people that helped him in his investigative Natural reactions came up with a bang in the McHale testimony. In his first minute he recalled how he wanted to take a vacation in July of 1947, and applied to Shimon. He had the rent all paid for a cottage for two weeks, he said, and his wife had leave, and the plans were all made but the answer he got from Shimon was no leave, that Shimon needed all the members of the DA's investigating squad for an official confidential assignment.

McHale went on to tell about seeing Shimon set up a wire tap in the Carlton, and listening in to two men and their visitors, also men. He said Shimon described the two men as advance body guards or investigators for Howard Hughes.

Things Were Quiet

At the Carlton, McHale said, there wasn't too much activity "and we moved to the Mayflower."

At the Mayflower tapping, McHale went on, he took notes, and gave them to Shimon.

McHale said they checked out of the Mayflower about 12:30 p. m. August 11, 1947, the last day of the mid-summer 1947 Hughes' probe.

In his listening to the Hughes' lines, McHale said he heard about many matters. He testified he heard about different girls and about Johnny Meyers.

He said a couple of days after they checked out of the Mayflower, he was in Shimon's outer office and Shimon was in his own office at the District Attorney's quarters. He said a stranger—about 35 years old, slender and well dressed—entered Shimon's office and closed the door. Five minutes later the stranger came out, followed by Shimon, who laid a $1000 bill on the desk where McHale was sitting.

Shimon looked down the hall, came back and picked up the bill and put it in his wallet, paused as if to say something, then went back into his own office, according to McHale's testimony.

Two years later McHale said he talked to Nolan about it the day after Shimon was married.

McHale said he asked Nolan if the 1947 wire tapping had been for official purposes, and that "Nolan asked me 'weren't you paid?'"

McHale then quoted Nolan as saying that Shimon never worked on a wire tapping job unless he got at least $1000.

A final witness, Joseph Tait, of the U. S. Recording Co., said he had from time to time loaned recording equipment to Shimon over a period of 12 years.

Ex-Planner for Afghanistan Is Named to Arlington Post

A former head of the national planning bureau in Afghanistan has accepted a key post in the planning division of Arlington County's department of public service.

County Manager A. T. Lundberg yesterday announced appointment of Frank E. Patterson as principal planner in the division, filling one of two positions created in a current county budget appropriation providing for expansion of the division.

Patterson, 40, served as head of Afghanistan's planning bureau for three and a half years until his resignation last May. During that time he also held the title of city planning architect-engineer in the Asiatic country.

A native of Philadelphia and graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, with graduate work in landscape architecture and city planning at Harvard, Patterson has wide experience in the planning field. He is a former landscape architect-engineer of Lawrence County, Pa.; worked for several years as an associate of the city planner in Richmond, Va., and served as a civilian employe of the Army Engineers in the development of ground installations in Florida early in World War II.

After induction into the Army, he served in Europe as a staff sergeant in Engineer Intelligence, assisting in preparation of scale maps used by the Army to plot invasions.

He was appointed to the Afghan post in 1946. He resigned early this year because he and his wife wanted to get back to America.

move was completed before the Korean War but a Civil Aeronautics Administration official said he understod two training groups had only recently left for Andrews.

Finletter's comment said the 40 percent move was "as much of its (Bolling's) flying activity" as Andrews Field could accommodate, indicating no further moves are yet possible.

Smith said it was an "open secret" that the CAA, under powers granted it in the airport bill, plans to locate the new field on a certain site near Annandale in Fairfax County, part of Smith's own district. He asked that the location not be made public—Chairman Sabath (D., Ill.) had suggested it—because an immediate rise in land cost to the Government would result.

Beckworth said the Government probably will buy or obtain control of "around 4000 acres" for the field to permit expansion. He made the statement after Republican members of the committee needled the Democrats on the fact that the late President Roosevelt personally chose the National Airport site and that it now is inadequate.

Smith also said he was unhappy that the bill did not contain a provision calling on the CAA to consult with local authorities before selecting the site. He said Fairfax citizens don't want the airport just "dropped in our midst." He said it is difficult to sleep within 5 miles of Natonal because of the constant air noise.

Beckworth said CAA boss D. W. Rentzel has promised to confer with local officials, and already has started to do so, but that such a provision had never before been formally written into a bill of this type.

Others backing the bill before the Rules Committee were Chairman Crosser (D., Ohio) of the Commerce Committee and Representative Harris (D., Ark., author of the House bill. The Senate sponsor was Chairman Johnson (D., Colo.) of the Commerce Committee.

July Auto Sales In D. C. Gained Over June

Sales of new automobiles in Washington during July totaled 2730, the Washington Automotive Trade Association announced yesterday. Sales in June amounted to 2477, the increase in July being attributed to war scare buying created by the hostilities in Korea.

Sales in both June and July this year were below those for the same months in 1949; June sales then numbered 3067 and those of July totaled 4302. The high demand at that time was attributed to a widespread effort to buy automobiles before the District sales tax became effective on August 1.

In Detroit Automotive News estimated yesterday that 184,215 cars and trucks will be built this week, consisting of 153,440 cars and 30,775 trucks. Production last week amounted to 149,759 cars and 30,096 trucks. The trade paper predicted that despite model change overs and work stoppages assemblies in August will total 833,000 units. This would be second only to the record total of 853,995 vehicles built in June this year.

BRANCH OPENING: The Suburban National Bank has completed arrangements for a branch on Flower ave., Silver Spring, near Piney Branch rd. The building is expected to be ready for occupancy January 1.

NEW AIDE HERE: J. G. Taylor has been appointed director of Government operations in Washington of the General Tire & Rubber Co. He will supervise sales activities in all departments of the Federal Government. Taylor joined General Tire 12 years ago as a sales representative here and directed the spare parts program for the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics during World War II. He joined the Navy in 1942 and when discharged was a lieutenant commander.

Taylor

PUBLIC RELATIONS: The local unit of the American Public Relations Association at its 12:15 p. m. meeting August 21 at the Lee House, will attempt a little self-analysis to improve its usefulness. The Rev. Alcuin V. Tasch, professor of higher education at Catholic University, and James R. Connor will serve as moderators.

BANK ASSETS: Assets of the 17 District banks which are members of the Federal Reserve System aggregated $1,081,695,000 on August 9, an increase of $15,280,000 in the preceding week and a gain of $174,480,000 over the corresponding 1949 week. Demand deposits totaled $831,891,000, a gain of $8,790,000 in the week and of $158,621,000 over the comparative 1949 total.

BANK ADDITION: The Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond yesterday announced plans to build a two-million-dollar addition to its office building. The six-story addition will add about 64,000 square feet of working space and will be ready for occupancy late next year.

EARNINGS: Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Co. yesterday reported net profit of $9,682,389 for the six months ended June 30, equal to $4.80 a share on its common stock. Net for the 1949 first half was $6,330,227, or $3.11 a share. Net profit for the June quarter was $4,989,323, or $2.47 a share, against $3,114,978, or $1.53 a share, a year earlier. New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—Cotton futures turned strong today, closing with gains of $1.95 to $2.55 a bale. Prospects of a squeeze in the country's cotton supply next spring due to a short crop this year, coupled with the rapid reduction in Government stocks, stimulated extensive demand for futures contracts.

Further buying, including active mill covering developed as it became apparent that most of the CCC cotton offered in the futures market today was being hedged on a scale-up basis.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 17 (AP).—All cereals except wheat ended lower on the Board of Trade today. A little mill buying saved wheat from the fate of the other grains, final prices being ahead fractionally after a session of minor price movements.

It was another dull day, the same as other days this week. The market appeared to be deep in midsummer doldrums, waiting for some new incentive. Grain men described it as a "trading market," meaning one of relatively small price changes with no definite underlying trend.

Wheat closed ⅛-½ higher, corn ⅜-1⅜ lower, oats ⅝-⅞ lower, rye ¾-1½ lower, soybeans 1¼ to 2 cents lower and lard 13 to 23 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Mill buying was not as aggressive as yesterday, but it had the same effect—lifting wheat out of an early slump and sending prices above the previous close. The buying from this source is attributed to an increase in flour bookings.

Stocks Rise To Hit Peak of 5-Week Rally

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—The stock market hit the high point of a five-week rally today.

Railroad stocks on average touched their peak since 1946.

The market generally, as measured by the Associated Press average of 60 stocks, all but wiped out the remnants of the heavy losses which followed immediately after our armed intervention in Korea.

WHAT STOCKS DID	Thurs.	Wed.
Declines	174	260
Advances	732	562
Unchanged	249	251
Total issues	1155	1073

A last-minute flurry of selling skimmed the cream of the rise and the railroad section was mainly affected.

The market was the broadest in more than three weeks.

Brokerage quarters attributed the rise in part to the secret meeting of the United Nations Security Council called for today by Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Malik.

Malik called the meeting, it was thought, to open a new peace offensive.

After the close of the market, however, Malik disclosed that unofficial views were exchanged on questions already publicly discussed.

The war news, apparently, had little direct effect on the market's trend despite the powerful North Korean thrust toward Taegu.

In the business background was another round of highly favorable profits and dividend announcements, some of which were mirrored in the stocks of companies affected.

No progress was reported toward settlement of a threatened national rail strike. President Truman late in the day said that he was hopeful a settlement would be reached without a strike.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced .7 of one point to 78.5, a peak since June 23.

France Borrows $225,000,000

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—The French government today concluded an agreement for two loans totaling $225,000,000 from a group of 25 American banks, headed by the Chase National Bank and J. P. Morgan & Co., Inc.

The primary loan is for $200,000,000. A note for one-quarter of this amount will mature in three years, another in four years and a note for 50 percent of the total in five years.

The bankers said the interest rate on the three-year note is 2¼ percent and on the four and five-year notes is 2½ percent. As collateral, the French stabilization fund will deposit with the bankers funds or investment securities in an amount equal to the loan.

International Harvester

Chicago, Aug. 17 (AP).—International Harvester Company today raised its quarterly dividend to 50 cents a common share from the 35 cents a share rate previously paid. The new dividend will be paid October 16 to stockholders of record September 15.

July Rail Revenues Gain

The Association of American Railroads yesterday estimated that railroad operating revenues last month were 11.8 percent higher than in July, 1949. The estimate was based on advance reports from representative large roads.

Cost of Labor Only One Item In Guaging Investment Rating

By J. A. Livingston

To my way of thinking, Standard & Poor's Corp., giant publishing and advisory firm which caters to the nation's large and small investors, has fallen into a trap. It cautions investors about buying stocks of companies which have big payrolls. All of which is reminiscent of the 'thirties, when John L. Lewis and the CIO were on the warpath. Yet times have changed.

Livingston

Says Standard: "The labor market is again showing signs of unrest. Fearing the imposition of a freeze on wages, unions are beginning to make demands for substantial increases in the pay scale, so as to beat any deadline." Thereupon, Standard presents a fairly comprehensive tabulation which shows how much of the sales dollar leading industrial corporations pay out in wages and salaries. Standard's inference: Stocks of companies with low payrolls relative to sales are better bets than companies with high-payroll-sales ratios.

During the 'thirties, it was fashionable to try to pick out stocks of companies with low wage-sales ratios, and preferably companies which weren't organized. But, as the result of CIO expansion, today most large companies are unionized. Union membership has bounded upward from about three million to 15 million. Result: Wages are not so important an investment criterion as formerly.

When a wage increase is granted by one company, it tends to set the pattern for other companies in the same industry. Witness the Bethlehem Steel settlement in the steel industry and the attempts of the United Auto Workers, after the General Motors agreement, to reopen its Ford contract. Further, when a wage pattern is set in one industry, it tends to percolate to other industries. Wage increases have become general. They're not localized.

The result is that even if a company itself has a relatively small wage bill, a wage rise will affect it because it will influence the costs of the companies it buys from. As an instance, Standard & Poor's notes that McKesson & Robbins pays out only 8.2% of its sales dollar in wages and salaries. Another drug company, American Home Products, pays out 23%. That would imply that in a period of rising wages, McKesson would be preferable to American Home Products.

But McKesson is essentially a drug wholesaler, though it manufactures some items. American Home Products is a manufacturer. Naturally, it has to support a higher payroll. When wages go up, McKesson will have to pay more for what it buys, because the manufacturers it buys from will have to pay higher wages. So, who can say, offhand, which company would be hit harder by a wage rise.

* * *

Standard & Poor's, itself, recognizes the latent fallacy. The tabulation shows that in 1949, wages and salaries at General Motors amounted to 25.3% of sales; at Chrysler to 16.8%, at Packard 18%. Comments Standard:

"It would be misleading to assume, on the basis of these statistics, that Chrysler is better situated than General Motors. The latter is a more completely integrated organization making a larger proportion of its own parts; consequently, its direct labor expense is high."

You might even turn the analysis around and say that stocks of integrated companies whose payrolls constitute a high proportion of the sales dollar are better off than companies which are not so well integrated and have a smaller direct payroll. They have more control over their cost. By negotiation with union leaders, by careful, efficient scheduling, they can manage their own wage costs. On the other hand, companies which are primarily assemblers depend on other managements to keep their costs down.

Wage and salary percentages vary from industry to industry. In bituminous coal, they run 55 percent of the selling price. That's because men and machines deliver a final product with very little processing. In aircraft, wage costs also run high, about 55 percent, primarily because assembling is an elaborate job, requiring highly skilled labor; also because engineering costs are high.

In autos, where so much is bought elsewhere, where the manufacturer is a designer and assembler, only 23 cents of the sales dollar goes into labor. But the suppliers of the motor makers—the parts companies—pay out 34.5 percent. Thus a wage rise in the auto industry would affect auto manufacturers' costs more through suppliers than directly.

In the final analysis, what counts in measuring the value of a common stock is not how much a company's labor costs are, but how efficient it is overall—in getting high productivity out of its workers, in selecting efficient, low-cost suppliers, in distributing its product successfully.

Anglicans Hit Vatican Dogma Of Assumption

London, Aug. 17 (AP).—Normally distant but courteous relations between the Church of England and the Vatican were strained tonight over the projected new Roman Catholic dogma that the Virgin Mary went to heaven in body as well as in spirit.

The Vatican City newspaper L'Osservatore Romano announced Monday that Pope Pius XII had called a secret consistory for October 30 to make belief in Mary's bodily ascension a dogma. This means the world's 423 million Roman Catholics must accept that belief as an article of faith or expose themselves to heresy. The pronouncement is to be made November 1.

Two of England's foremost Anglican churchmen declared there wasn't a shred of evidence, either "in the Scriptures or in the teachings of the early church," to support that doctrine.

Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, Archbishop of Canterbury, and Or. Cyril F. Garbett, Archbishop of York, issued a formal statement saying:

"We profoundly regret that the Roman Catholic Church has chosen by this act to increase dogmatic differences in Christendom and has thereby gravely injured the growth of understanding between Christians based on a common possession of the fundamental truths of the Gospel. . .

"The Church of England refuses to regard as requisite for a saving faith and doctrines or opinions which are not plainly contained in the Scriptures."

The Church of England, has a membershp, in Wales, Scotland and Ireland of about 3,700,000. A segment would like to see closer relations between Canterbury and the Vatican.

The English church and Rome have been at loggerheads over questions of dogma on at least two other occasions in the past 100 years. These were the Catholic proclamations of the Immaculate Conception of Mary in 1854 and of the infallibility of the Pope on question of faith and morals, enunciated in 1870.

At Cambridge, Dr. J. C. Wright speaking to the Modern Churchmen's Conference added his views to the dogma controversy.

He said many church dogmas were false, "like the mirage in the desert," and ought to be reshaped.

"Few Christian scholars," he said, "have any confidence that what is called virgin birth was historical fact, and there are a number of possible and permissible theories of what is called the Resurrection, the Ascension and the Judgment."

500 Acres—100 Acres Sold For Development

This acreage is located 4 blocks over the District line in the zone of the New South Capitol St. bridge. This Bridge is operating now with a capacity of 50,000 automobiles a day. They also propose to bring a bridge from Alexandria over to this neighborhood. The East Capitol Street Bridge will be built shortly and that also will assimilate traffic in this section. The Pennsylvania Ave. St. bridge and the 11th St. bridge is also furnishing traffic in this neighborhood. The Baltimore Blvd. is coming down in this vicinity. It will make this the greatest commercial and traffic center and also make this a great shopping district. Land where shopping centers are needed is usually worth a million dollars an acre. A small cemetery on a portion of this property can be enlarged. They don't allow any new cemeteries in Maryland except to enlarge those which are already there. Cemeteries when fully developed usually are worth around a $100,000 an acre. This property can be had as an entirety at $4000 per acre. Property is clear of encumbrance and will sell on reasonable terms. I am settling my own estate in my 84th year, otherwise I wouldn't sell.

Now another piece of acreage I want to tell you about is: I have the finest setting for a home in a fashionable neighborhood in this part of the United States. I offer this property to the public at cost, plus taxes and interest for the 22 years I have owned it and they wouldn't buy it. I am building my own home there and it is nearly finished. This property fronts River Road right opposite the entrance to the Congressional Club. Just stop your car as you pass along River Road and you will see the most beautiful home and also the most beautiful setting for a home in this part of the United States. Look at it and if you want it, to build a beautiful home there, ride up and talk to Mr. Elgin, one of the best builders in Montgomery County. You can build your home on the adjoining property. I go out to see my new home every day and my wife and I both get a thrill out of it every time we look at it. Ride out and see if you don't get a thrill out of it. Fulton R. Gordon, owner. You can reach me at my home WO. 0933. Brokers attention.

'Women Aren't Men'

Womanhood Holds Key to Better Society

(This is the last of a series reprinted through the courtesy of the Atlantic Monthly, in the August issue of which these articles initially appeared.)

CHAPTER FIVE

By Agnes E. Meyer

Because woman, if only for self-protection, must preserve monogamy and keep the home intact, it is woman who should make herself responsible for the success of marriage. Never will we be able to decrease the divorce rate until modern woman faces and accepts this responsibility as her obvious duty. Making divorce more difficult will do no good. On the contrary, our divorce laws should be uniform and a divorce accessible by common consent in those cases where gross abuses make divorce unavoidable. But in most cases it would not be necessary if young women could lead lives that permit them to mature toward the balanced womanhood I have tried to describe, and chose their husbands not as a consequence of some infantile repressions or mere sex appeal but with a view to permanent partnership. If marriages are made purely on a basis of sex, they will be dissolved for the same reason, and that is a game which women cannot win. It is a threat to their whole status in society because it implies a disrespect for the importance of the marital bonds and of monogamy. Thus the mounting divorce rate is a sign that women as a whole do not realize that they are committing what can only be termed moral suicide.

Discipline of Marriage

The egoistic desires of women have been so accentuated by the indiscriminate struggle for equal rights that the discipline of marriage, the subordination of self that it entails, and the adjustment of personality upon which it depends have become increasingly difficult if not repugnant to them. Far too many women have not only lost their instinct for self-protection; they have lost their sense of joyousness and their sense of humor. What do these self-centered, egoistic women expect in the man they marry—a paragon of all the virtues and a wealthy one to boot? Even though he be a genius or a millionaire, the husband of the neurotic, introverted female is doomed to failure. If she has the one, she will begin to yearn for the other. Her mean search for personal happiness never lets her decide whether marriage should be a feather in her cap or a feather in her nest.

More Good Fathers

As I go about my social research today, especially among uprooted families living in the vast new housing developments, I am often forced to the conclusion that there are more good fathers today than good mothers. The infantilism of selfishness, the desire for a false self-expression, and a consequent desiccation of instinct lead all too many women to despise the role of housewife, to reject their children and resent the father. I fear it is too late to change many of these women. When they seek a divorce they rationalize this supreme act of selfishness by telling themselves that their children will only suffer if they grow up in a divided household. Of course they will. It does not occur to such women that theirs is the prime duty to see that the household is not divided. And though occasionally divorce may be the only way out of a deadly impasse, 9 times out of 10 the wife who lets her marital relationship get into such an impasse has only herself to blame.

The Duty of Women

To be sure, there are external conditions today which seriously threaten the family and make the life of women extremely difficult—constant migration, inadequate housing, poor educational, health and welfare facilities. To remedy these defects of our society is the duty of women whose children have grown up or who for other reasons are free to devote themselves to public service. The wide gaps which still exist between our social ideals and the sordid realities need not be discouraging if we see our shortcomings as a spur to greater effort. Democracy is, first and foremost, the perpetual revelation of greater capacities in the human mind and soul. It is the only form of government that sets no bounds to the possibilities of man. Its doors all open toward the future. It converts every end into new means. And it will not get the reverence it deserves the world over until America makes manifest that democracy is not earthbound but a divine quest for humanity's spiritual perfection. Upon woman, who is biologically close to nature and all its sublime intimations, rests the chief task of reminding the country that democracy is not restricted to the desire for creature comforts but encourages an ever expanding concept of man's destiny.

Not Too Exacting

Is this call to the psychic defense and the moral rejuvenation of our society too exacting a role for American womanhood? No, and again, no. As I said at the outset, there are already numerous indications of the reorientation of woman's thinking as evidenced among other things by many successful young marriages of the finest type, and by an avalanche of more and yet more babies. If it is difficult to carry out the high role of woman in our modern society, it is also a great honor to be a woman in this critical historical period. Now that destruction threatens us from within and without, woman's role in society is again recognized as the fundamental, essential and vital one that it always has been. For as mother, woman represents the focal point of time and eternity and the perpetual triumph of life over death.

Six Laid Off By C. & P. Sue For $160,000

Six employes of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., laid off in January, 1949, yesterday sued the company for more than $169,000 they say is due them in lay-off benefits under their union contract.

The six, who had worked for the company for periods from 20 to 42 years, also claimed more than $10,000 in pension payments, and more than $3000 in commissions from the rentals of street address directories.

They are: William W. Bennett, 10202 Summit ave., Kensington,, Md.; Herbert S. Freeman, Brandywine, Md., George L. Hagans, 212 Lake ave., Cheverly, Md.; Albert Jeager, 4200 13th pl. ne.; Richard C. Topham, 8316 Potomac ave., College Park, Md., and Lawrence Walton, 1524 Read Oak dr., Silver Spring, Md.

All are members of Washington Division 36, Communications Workers of America.

Under terms of the union contract, the group claimed in their District Court suit, each is entitled to layoff payments amounting to one week's pay for every year of service up to five years, one week's pay for every six months' service from 5 to 14 years, and one week's pay for every four months' service, after 14 years.

The company refused to arbitrate the question of layoff payments, the suit said.

The largest single claim, $49,229.85, was made by Jaeger. Walton asked for more than $40,000. Smallest of the six claims was made by Topham. He asked for $12,289.

Company officials had no comment.

Stern Loses Again; Wendy Wins Easily

—By John Crosby—

BILL STERN, broadcaster of all sports and master of none, tackled the Davis Cup interzone finals with commendable courage though, of course, no competence. Now that he has scaled this particular Materhorn, has, as it were, put tennis in the record, he can go on to other matters. I suggest he try broadcasting a bullfight, preferably in Spain.

Stern

He couldn't do any worse at it. If Stern knows anything at all about tennis, he concealed it with immense skill. It seems inconceivable that anyone could announce a whole match without once encountering the words volley, half volley, forcing shot, ground strokes or any of the other numerous tennis expressions. About all Stern seems to know about tennis is how to keep score, and occasionaly he gets confused about that.

It would be a national calamity at least among tennis enthusiasts if Stern were permitted to broadcast the Davis Cup matches between the United States and Australia or the national singles matches at Forest Hils. In the dear old dead days of radio it was bad enough to have the untutored announcing sports. At least, their ignorance was kept out of sight. With television they stand naked in the market place.

NBC wouldn't dream of getting their war coverage from a reporter who knew nothing about Korea or armies or the world situation. Why do it to a tennis match? If someone would just get Ted Husing away from his disk jockey profession . . . there was a man who knew tennis.

THE ad lib shows which are springing up like crocuses al over television have produced a specially virulent form of intermural warfare, a sort of "Camera! Camera! Who's got the camera?" game. The other night I watched two pastmasters, Wendy Barrie and John Reed King, vying expertly.

"Tell us all about yourself," murmured Miss Barrie. She was admiring her scarf at the time, running it through her fingers, coiling it around her wrists, inspecting the fabric. In other words, the old handkerchief trick in its most primitive form.

A steely glint entered King's eye. He picked up the watch Miss Barrie had just given him for appearing on the program, admired it extravagantly, wound it, put it on his wrist, adjusted it, and then fell to admiring it some more.

Miss Barrie's lips tightened and she went to work in earnest. She began adjusting her dress, a little pull here, a little smoothing there, especially around the area so inaccurately known as the neckline. (The whistle should have blown right there. The international rules on Scene Snitching expressly forbid any female from fiddling with her dress, 14 or less inches from the clavicle. Miss Barrie should have been put in the penalty box for at least two minutes. Badly refereed match.)

According to my scoreboard, it was Wendy's match, 5 to 2. King, I should say, is out of his class. He needs more experience in the minor leagues or, say, "Leave It to the Girls," before taking on any such formidable opponent. And, for heaven's sake, man, stay away from Faye Emerson! You'd be flat on your back in five minutes.

Senate Unit Approves Exempting Civil Service Pensions From Taxes

A Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Subcommittee yesterday took these actions:

Approved a bill by Senator Langer (R., N. Dak.), to exempt Civil Service pensions from Federal income taxes. The measure was indorsed by the Civil Service Commission which explained that Social Security benefits, veterans' pensions, and railroad retirement benefits were exempt from income taxes.

Indefinitely postponed a bill by Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.) to allow an employe who has 20 or more years of service and who is laid off in a reduction of force to be retired on an annuity to be reduced 3 percent for each year he's under 60. That means the bill is dead for this session of Congress.

Okayed a bill by Senator O'Conor (D., Md.) to allow temporary employes on Capitol Hill who have at least a year of service to be covered by the Civil Service retirement system. And finally approved a bill by Senator Johnston (D., S. C.) to cover under the retirement system those employes paid either in whole or in part from Federal funds and who have had a minimum of 5 years of creditable service. This measure would benefit thousands of Agriculture employes.

SECURITY: The President is sure to sign the bill before him to give the heads of sensitive Federal agencies the authority to fire employees on security grounds. But the measure is due to be changed shortly after it becomes law. Here's why:

The security bill gives the heads of Commerce and State Departments, among others, the right to fire employes as security risks. But the bill gives accused employes the right of appeal to Civil Service.

On the other hand, riders to the general budget bill would give State and Commerce heads sweeping authority to fire employes on the same ground. No appeal is provided for accused employes in the riders. The riders would supersede the security law.

Another change will be ordered at the Army Department which will come under the President's loyalty program. The Army will permit employes accused of disloyalty to appeal to the Loyalty Review Board. It will use the security program only to get rid of employes who handle classified data and who talk too much, etc.

MARITIME: Francis T. Greene, legal advisor for the Military Aid Program, is transferring to Maritime to be deputy general counsel.

JOBS: Civil Service is accepting applications for these jobs: architect, $3825 to $5400 annually to start, and motion picture projectionist, $2650 to $3825.

P&MA: At Agriculture's Production and Marketing Administration, cash awards for economy suggestions have been given to: Ralph F. DeSimone, Marian V. Powers, C. Taber Stephens, Harritte T. Thompson, Ruby J. Willis, and Joseph Zuessman.

BIG BUDGET: The 1952 Federal budget may be bigger in more ways than one. It may have to be compiled in two big volumes. Budget Bureau planners are considering the idea. Here's why:

The new accounting bill approved by Congress is aimed toward a streamlined budget that would require fewer employes in agency budget offices and the General Accounting Office. But before the House approved the bill, it added an amendment by Rep. Taber (R., N. Y.) to require each agency to submit a schedule of employes, grade by grade, for several years.

Such a table on personal services was included in the President's budget every year until this one. The bulky table may be set up in a separate volume.

NOTES: Esther Struthers is retiring today from Federal Security's Bureau of Employes Compensation . . . The Naval Gun Factory is giving a Civil Service exam for master mechanics. Several present employes have the inside track for the jobs . . . The factory, incidentally, is merely filling vacated jobs up to this time. No large-scale expansion has been authorized . . . Senator Douglas (D., Ill.) and several other Senators are jointly sponsoring a bill to authorize the Civil Service Commission to set up a special unit to place handicapped persons in Government.

D. C. Printer Killed When Crushed by Teacher's Car

New Auto Driven By Owner Reported To Be Going Only 10 MPH at the Time

District Traffic Toll:

1950 deaths to date......40
1949 deaths to date......38
Total 1949 death toll.....71

A 45-year-old man who was taking a walk to gain relief from an asthmatic attack was crushed to death by an automobile yesterday morning at 14th and Irving sts. nw.

The victim, Robert S. Dyke, a printer, of 1471 Irving st. nw., was pronounced dead at the scene.

Police said the car that struck Dyke was a brand new automobile with only 61 miles on the speedometer and that it was driven by a District junior high school teacher who obtained her driver's permit only three months ago.

She is Miss Angeline Anderson, 35, of 3253 23d st. se., a teacher of typing at Hine Junior High School. During the summer she is employed in the payroll division of the District Recreation Department at 16th and Lamont sts. nw.

Police said Dyke was crossing Irving st. with a green light when he was struck. They said Miss Anderson was driving south on 14th st. and entered the intersection with the green light and made a wide right turn into Irving st.

Moving Slowly

Witnesses told police the car was traveling at only about 10 miles an hour and that Miss Anderson sounded her horn as she made the turn.

What followed then, according to the teacher's own account, was that she lost control of the car. She stretched her foot for the brake but instead stepped on the gas pedal.

Dyke was carried on the front of the car as it mounted the sidewalk and he was crushed between the car and the front of a liquor store at the corner of 14th and Irving sts.

Within five hours an inquest into Dyke's death was held at the morgue and a coroner's jury, after hearing testimony from Detective Emmitt Waters of the accident investigation unit, directed that Miss Anderson be held under the negligent homicide act.

Miss Anderson was then arraigned before Judge George D. Neilson in Municipal Court. He continued her case indefinitely and freed her in $1000 bond.

Victims Better

Meanwhile, two Washington residents, a brother and sister, were reported improved after a traffic accident Wednesday night near Narragansett, R. I.

They are Paul A. McDonald, 20, a student at Catholic University, and his sister, Mrs. John Stanko, 23, both of 5324 28th st. nw.

McDonald suffered a fractured hip and head injuries. Mrs. Stanko received cuts and bruises.

The Belleville, Ontario, Hospital reported continued improvement yesterday in the conditions of Mrs. Tina Zeender and her three sons, of 3030 Chestnut st. nw., injured in an automobile accident in Canada Tuesday.

Mrs. Zeender's husband, Robert M. Zeender, 43, part owner of the Henri & Robert beauty salon, 2625 Connecticut ave. nw., was fatally injured in the crash.

Boy's Leg Broken

Ten-year-old Norman Lederman, of Philadelphia, Pa., suffered a broken right leg yesterday when he stepped off a bus into the path of an automobile at Georgia and Dennis aves., Silver Spring, Md.

The driver of the car, Mrs. Lydia Poole Shrader, 33, 2100 Belvedere dr., Silver Spring, was charged with reckless driving by Montgomery County Police at Silver Spring.

A seven-year-old Arlington boy was reported in critical condition last night in Arlington Hospital after being struck by an automobile on Lee hwy.

The boy, William Eugene Paxton of 2521 Lee hwy., walked into a car driven by Mrs. Mary E. Rector, 20, of McLean, Va., according to police, who did not make any charges. The accident occurred at Lee hwy. and Cleveland st., Arlington.

Young Paxton was taken to the hospital by a county ambulance. He was suffering from head injuries, cuts and bruises and shock.

Bandit Takes $290 After Getting Help With Cash Register

An armed bandit who had to get help in opening the cash register of the Adam Hat Shop, 1329 F st. nw., last night scooped up $290 in bills and change and escaped on foot, police reported.

The holdup man used a 32-caliber, nickel-plated gun to force Herman Fagan of 1631 Holbrook st. ne., store manager, and Paul Enten of 1718 10th st. nw., assistant manager, into the rear of the shop and down on the floor.

The police lookout was for a white man about 165 pounds and 5 feet 7, 35 to 40 years old, wearing a blue check suit, tan hat with brown band, leather belt with a large silver initialed buckle, blue tie and light shirt.

City Revives Deferment Committee

The District Commissioners have reactivated the agency committee—created during the last war—to decide which city employes are so essential they should be exempted from military service.

Geoffrey M. Thornett, secretary to the Board of Commissioners and a member of the committee, said its work thus far has consisted of asking department heads to submit lists of key workers. The committee probably will meet early in September to pass on the list, he said.

Committee Secretary Victor A. Howard said that if the committee functions as it did previously it will recommend deferments to the District Commissioners, who will in turn make their recommendations to Selective Service or other Federal officials.

During the last war the Commissioners sought deferments for all police and firemen with more than one year's service, Howard recalled. All other jobs were considered individually, he said.

The committee's present problem is complicated by the fact that many city employes, particularly police and firemen, are members of some reserve organization of the armed forces. The committee must work out a policy regarding reserves, Thornett said.

Chairman of the five-man committee is District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler, who is also chairman of the District Personnel Board. Serving with him, besides Thornett, are Lieut. Col. Thomas J. Hayes 3d, Assistant Engineer Commissioner; Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, and Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett.

Berserk Man Slain by Cop Had Record

Mental Health Board Freed Deans Twice Within a Year After Actions Caused Arrest

A 52-year-old man who was shot to death by police Wednesday night after he went berserk with a hammer had a previous record of mental unstability, it was disclosed at an inquest yesterday.

It was brought out that Edward Deans, 45[illegible] Massachusetts ave. nw., had been taken into custody by police twice in less than a year and committed to Gallinger Hopsital for mental observation.

On both occasions he was released after hearings before the Commission on Mental Health.

The coroner's jury which heard the evidence exonerated Pvt. Milton N. Stottlemyer of the First Precinct in connection with Deans' death. Stottlemyer and his partner, Pvt. William H. Sampson, shot down Deans in the basement at the Massachusetts ave. address when he attacked them with a hammer.

Before police arrived, Deans had bludgeoned Eddie Randolph, 5, and the child's mother, Mrs. Helen Randolph, 41, who live at the Massachusetts ave. address.

The boy is in critical condition at Casualty Hospital with a fractured skull and deep head wounds. Mrs. Randolph was treated and released.

Stottlemyer also suffered head injuries. He spent the night at the hospital but was present for the inquest.

One of the witnesses was Detective Serg. Lawrence Hartnett of the homicide squad, who testified FBI tests determined the bullet that killed Deans came from Stottlemyer's revolver.

Stottlemyer testified he and Sampson entered the basement after Deans' assault on Mrs. Randolph and her son and called to Deans to drop the hammer as they approached him.

Instead, Stottlemyer said Deans lunged at them with such force that although they fired before he reached them, his impetus carried all three men to the floor. As they met, the hammer crashed against Stottlemyer's head.

Testimony showed Deans was first taken into custody on a mental charge in November, 1949, after he went to the Fourteenth Precinct and complained a man was out to kill him.

At a hearing on November 21, the Commission on Mental Health found Deans "recovered from a psychotic episode and improved sufficiently to be discharged on his own responsibility."

Police again took a hand when, on June 15, Deans went to the First Precinct and complained that four men were waiting outside to kill him. Police found no men outside.

Rental Rates For Linens Increased

Two linen supply houses yesterday announced increases in linen rental rates here, effective today, and spokesmen for other suppliers said they would follow suit.

Officials blamed a recent jump in the price of cotton goods, particularly sheets, and wage increases to laundry employes.

An estimated 40,000 hotels, offices, doctors, dentists, barbers, beauty shops and householders will be affected by the rental rise, trade sources said.

The increases, first in several years, will come to 5 cents more for each piece of wearing apparel such as uniforms, soda fountain shirts, as well as table cloths, according to spokesmen for C & C Service and American Linen Service Co.

Aprons will increase from 12 to 13 cents per rental, while barbers' and doctors' towels will cost half a cent more than the 1½ and 2 cents charged before.

Sesqui to Honor Governor Scott on No. Carolina Day

Governor and Mrs. W. Kerr Scott of North Carolina will be feted here today, both by the North Carolina State Society and the Washington Sesquicentennial Commission.

Today is North Carolina Day at the new National Amphitheater, where the Paul Green drama, "Faith of Our Fathers," is being presented.

Governor Scott's schedule for the day includes a meeting with United States Maritime Commission officials, concerning North Carolina ports; an appointment with Secretary of Interior Chapman on a proposed hydro-electric dam at Roanoke Rapids, N. C., a dinner in their honor by the State society and, finally, the Sesquicentennial drama.

Concerning the drama, the Sesquicentennial commissioners yesterday announced that Federal and District government employes may get their tickets at a 20 percent discount from now through Labor Day.

22 European Youths Here, Visit Truman

Teen-Agers on 6-Week 'Magic Carpet' Tour, Backed by Tennesseeans

President Truman told 22 European teen-agers yesterday that exchange visits of young people of different nations are "the best thing in the world to implement a friendly foreign policy."

The visit with the President at the White House climaxed a six-week "magic carpet" tour of the United States by the youths as guests of Youth, Inc., a non-profit Tennessee organization.

Earlier in the day the students visited the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, were received on the District Building steps, saw a display of District Fire Department equipment and went shopping in a department store.

The boy from Italy bought nylon stockings for his mother, the boy from Portugal bought "a sweater for a lady, my mother," the Dutch boy bought the recorded speeches of Roosevelt and Churchill. The girl from Greece: "I bought a crazy tie for my brother—in Greece we consider that all ties are crazy."

An admirable sentiment these warm days.

Since arriving in this country July 5 the youths—age 17, most of them—have lived in the camp operated by Youth, Inc., in Nashville and in the homes of Tennesseeans. They have made side trips to Chicago, Mammoth Cave, Oak Ridge and other places.

Their good-will trip is due to end today when they leave Washington for New York and Europe.

Represented were Holland, Wales, Spain, England, Italy, Sweden, Scotland, Norway, Northern Ireland, Portugal, Greece, France, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, Switzerland, Ireland, Germany, Luxembourg, Turkey and Austria.

AFL League Backs Meyer Against Tydings in Primary

Baltimore, Aug. 17 (AP).—The AFL's State Political Education League will oppose the bid of Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), for a fifth term.

It announced last night it has indorsed former Congressman John A. Meyer, one of Tydings' three opponents in the September 18 Democratic primary. Meyer, a Baltimore attorney, served in Congress from 1941 to 1943.

The league is formally known as the Maryland State and District of Columbia Labor League for Political Education. It is sponsored by the Maryland-District of Columbia AFL. Harry Cohen, league chairman, is president of the Maryland-D. C. AFL.

The labor group also announced indorsement of Governor Lane and his running mates, Attorney General Hall Hammond and Comptroller J. Millard Tawes.

In making indorsements for Congress, the league passed over four incumbents who are seeking reelection.

Second (Central Maryland) District—William Boucher, III.

Third (Baltimore City) District—Rep. Edward A. Garmatz.

Fourth (Baltimore City) District—Mrs. Sarah Whitehurst.

Fifth (Southern Maryland) District—Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer.

Sixth (Western Maryland) District—William Prescott Allen.

Montgomery Rally Slated for Sept. 6

Governor William Preston Lane, jr., of Maryland and his running mates will join the Montgomery County candidates of the Democratic Victory Committee slate in addressing a county-wide public rally September 6. Site of the rally has not yet been selected.

Accompanying the Governor will be J. Millard Tawes, unopposed for the Democratic nomination for State Comptroller, and Attorney General Hall Hammond, candidate for the Democratic nomination to succeed himself. The State candidates will attend a dinner at the Columbia Country Club prior to the rally.

All members of the slate indorsed by the Democratic Victory Committee will attend.

Free Democrats Seek Lindsay Law Repeal

Repeal of the Lindsay Law requiring party primaries for Montgomery County Council candidates is one of the things legislative candidates of the Free Democratic faction will work for if elected, it was announced yesterday.

Five candidates of the Free Democratic slate, Robert W. Beall, candidate for the State Senate; Donald A. DeLashmutt, R. Shirley Hays, Edwin Brown and Charles D. Sanger, jr., seeking House of Delegates seats, yesterday announced this is part of their platform.

The legislative candidates also said they will support laws to bring the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission and the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board under control of the County Council.

Butler to Speak At North Brentwood

John Marshall Butler, candidate for the Republican nomination for United States Senator from Maryland, will speak at a turkey box supper rally of the "Know Your Precinct Republican Club" of North Brentwood, Md., at 8 p. m. today in the North Brentwood town hall.

Lane and Mahoney Assail Each Other

Baltimore, Aug. 17 (AP).—Governor Lane and George P. Mahoney were blasting away at each other again last night in their bitter fight for the Democratic nomination for the governorship.

Each discussed contentions made by the other the night before.

Lane said it costs less and not more to operate the executive department now than it did when he took over the job.

And Mahoney, in reply to Lane's query as to why he (Mahoney) had not clarified his tax stand, said Lane should "conduct his own campaign and not worry about how I am conducting mine."

Fire Losses Here Climb 50 Percent

Property loss from Washington fires the last fiscal year was $1,529,930—50 percent above 1949—District Fire Marshal R. C. Roberts reported yesterday.

The number of fires listed in the year ending June 30 was 20 percent above the number in the previous fiscal year—5807 compared to 4891. But Roberts said three big fires last year accounted for most of the $500,000 increase. They were:

A $153,000 blaze at Aristo Cleaners, 1226 S. Capital st.; a $130,000 fire at Kaufman's Department Store, 1316 7th st. nw. and a $125,000 fire at the Brookland Bowling Alleys, 3726 10th st. nw.

Fire loss per District resident increased from $1.14 to $1.98, but Roberts doubted if it would have any immediate effect on fire insurance rates. The per-capita fire loss in the District has consistently been lower than in most other cities, Robert said, and insurance rates are based on a five-year average rather than on one year's figures.

Roberts' figures also showed an increase in the number of fire casualties. Last year 43 civilians were killed and 180 injured by fires, as compared with 34 deaths and 134 burns the previous year.

9 Lawyers Named On City Trial Boards

Nine lawyers yesterday were named to serve as the legal members of the Police and Fire Department trial boards for the coming year.

The appointments were announced by Jo V. Morgan, president of the Bar Association of the District of Columbia.

They are Donald H. Dalton, Wallace L. Schubert, Nathaniel J. Ely, William F. Fadler, jr., David L. Grantham, James Shenos, Dudley G. Skinker, Ralph Stein and Joseph G. Weeda.

Child-Help Group Issues Final Report, Disbands

D. C. Committee For Midcentury Conference Stopped By Lack of Funds

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

The District Committee for the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth—forced to stop in the midst of its work last month for lack of funds—yesterday issued its final report and disbanded.

The citizens' group was created last fall by the District Commissioners to prepare for the December conference on youth problems that is held here each year. Its work consisted not only of searching out problems here for presentation at the conference, but also of laying the basis for a long-range planning program for needed child services in the District.

Subcommittees Report

Its report released yesterday included reports from four subcommittees listing problems and recommending action:

(1) Education. The public should recognize the "excessive cost" of racial segregation in schools and the impossibility of carrying out the "separate but equal" theory. Special school services for handicapped children should be extended. There should be more money for teachers' salaries to reduce present shortages. New schools should be built to replace the 41 considered unsafe by the Strayer Report.

(2) Recreation. There should be more camping facilities for girls, extension of programs for older teenagers, more facilities for handicapped children, public recognition of problems resulting from "the operation of the recreation program almost entirely on a segregated basis."

(3) Health. Studies should be made in the following fields: child population increase in the last decade in relation to the amount spent for health services; population shifts and the extent to which services have kept up with them; number of children excluded from school as uneducable and what has happened to them, what treatment was made available; need for special services—such as speech training and mental hygiene—among pre-school children; legal barriers against effective health services for children.

(4) Family Life. Questionnaires should be compiled for parents to stimulate their interest in being better parents. Parent education facilities should be studied and their wider use encouraged.

The committee said it will try to interest other organizations in carrying on the work where it left off. There was no mention of what part the District will play in the December conference.

Mrs. Henry Gichner, chairman of the committee, told the Commissioners last month that her group could not function without a permanent staff. Since the District had given it no money, the committee would have to quit, she said.

Judge Dismisses Case of Soldiers And Missed Date

Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson yesterday refused to convict a man for obtaining $9 under false pretenses from two soldiers who had asked him for two prostitutes.

He dismissed the case against Theodore Hawkins, 37, 8 Canal st. nw. The evidence indicated that Hawkins had taken the money from the soldiers, directed them to two empty rooms and then fled.

Judge Neilson told Andrew Howard, assistant United States attorney, that he did not want the court to become party to a trap. "You are accusing one man of one crime, and if you proved that you would prove another crime (soliciting prostitution). And you are also accusing one man of taking money from men themselves bound on committing a crime," he said.

Polio Cases Increase 1442 Over Nation

There were 1442 new cases of infantile paralysis reported througout the Nation last week, Public Health Service scorekeepers announced yesterday.

Though the number represents an increase of 256 over the preceding week, it is well under half the total of 3153 cases recorded during the corresponding week of last year.

Last week's cases brought this year's polio toll to 8744 cases. There were 13,878 recorded for the same period last year. This year's total since the disease started its annual season, in March, is 7610 cases, as compared to 12,963 for the same time in 1949.

It was during the current week, last year, that infantile paralysis reached its peak, with 3416 cases reported during the seven-day period that ended August 20. Total number of cases recorded in calendar 1949 was 42,375, the highest ever reported.

Virginia showed up in the national totals with 94 new cases recorded during last week. During the same week last year Virginia had only 26 new cases. The State's total to Saturday was 422; last year it was 108.

Maryland reported 29 new cases for last week, more than four times the seven reported in the same week of 1949. For the year to Saturday, Maryland showed 70 new cases, to 48 recorded for the same period of last year.

Eleven of Virginia's 94 cases of last week were recorded in Alexandria and Arlington and Fairfax Counties, while 10 of Maryland's 29 cases of the week were reported in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties.

The Washington area breakdown for the week included: District, 15 cases; Montgomery County, 7; Prince Georges County, 3; Alexandria, 1; Arlington County, 5, and Fairfax County, 5, for an area total of 36.

Two new area cases were reported here yesterday, one in the District and one in Montgomery County. The District victim was identified as a 5-year-old girl living in the 500 block of 14th st. ne. In Montgomery County, yesterday's victim was identified as a 9-year-old girl of the 6500 block of Ridgewood rd., Chevy Chase.

Total Now 29

Va. Reports 2 Deaths From Polio

Richmond, Va., Aug. 17 (AP).—Two more polio deaths—both from southwest Virginia—were reported to the State Health Department today, bringing the year's total to 29.

One was a Wythe County resident, the other a seven-year-old Craig County boy who died en route to Roanoke's Memorial and Crippled Children's Hospital.

The Craig boy's brother was admitted to the hospital as a new case, one of ten new cases reported to the department today. These brought the State total to 434 for the year, way ahead of the 262 cases at this date in 1944, previous high polio year in Virginia. Last year there had been 16 cases at this time.

There were no new cases from Wythe County today, second day in a row there have been none from the Nation's polio hot spot.

One of the Nation's top authorities on polio, Dr. John R. Paul, professor of preventive medicine at Yale University, began taking blood samples at the Medical College of Virginia Hospital here today. Dr. Paul plans an extensive study of the Virginia outbreak.

He recently returned from studies of polio virus in Israeli and Egypt. From studies of inoculated monkeys, Dr. Paul hopes to identify strains of polio virus, about which little is known .

Dr. Paul will visit Wytheville and Roanoke Friday.

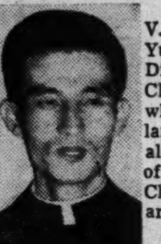
Chinese Priest Will Serve Countrymen

Washington Chinese Catholics for the first time have a priest who can speak their language, and about 100 dialects of it at that.



Fr. Sang

He's the Rev. V. A. Wong Yuen Sang, the District's first Chinese pastor, whose hobby is languages. He is also the author of a 70,000-word Chinese dictionary.

Father Wong arrived in this country last month, and was brought to Washington by Archbishop O'Boyle to act as chaplain and unofficial adviser to the Chinese population.

About 50 Chinese attended his first mass Tuesday in St. Mary's Church, 725 5th st. nw. Father Wong said he eventually hoped to organize a Catholic church here, but "that is in the dim future."

Born in Hongkong, Father Wong grew up in Canton, and was ordained three years ago in Nanking. He has traveled extensively in Europe and Asia, but this is his first visit to the United States.

Father Wong, who speaks excellent English, said he learned most of it on the boat coming over here. "I have an aptitude for languages," he said, "I can give sermons in about 100 dialects of Chinese."

J. C. Fletcher Dies; 50 Years A Riverman

Burial will be in the cemetery of the Walker Chapel Methodist Church, Arlington.

"Captain" Fletcher, proprietor of Fletcher's Boathouse near Chain Bridge, died in his waterfront home there Wednesday after an illness of more than a year.

Before returning home 11 days ago, he had spent a year in the Washington Sanitarium at Takoma Park, Md.

The boathouse now has been in the Fletcher family for four generations. It was founded by his grandfather, also named Joseph Fletcher, in the days when the C&C Canal was a going concern and mule teams towed freight barges from Georgetown to Cumberland, Md.

Born in the same house in which he died Wednesday, Mr. Fletcher knew the currents, snags, bars and rocks of the Potomac, knew where the fish were and how to get them, and had some of the river's largest rockfish to his credit. He was a member of the Isaac Walton League.

His boathouse furnished boats and fishing tackle for fishermen, and canoes for countless weekend spins and Watergate concerts.

During his half century on the river Mr. Fletcher often assisted in the rescue of capsized amateur mariners, occasionally helped recover bodies of drowning victims.

Surviving are his two sons, Julius Fletcher, the fourth generation of Fletchers to operate the boathouse; Joseph Fletcher, also of Washington, and two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth R. Magruder and Mrs. John Bernd, Arlington.

NationalBanks Here Win Tax Refund Fight

Nine national banks in the District yesterday won a five-year tax fight which may net them nearly a half-million-dollar refund from the District government.

Lawrence Koenigsberger, sole member of the District Board of Tax Appeals, ruled—as the banks had contended—that they should be taxed at the rate of 4, rather than 6, percent and that deductions should be allowed for interest paid depositors.

For the last five years the District has taxed the banks at the higher rate and refused to allow these deductions. The national banks and others paid the higher rate under protest while contesting the action in the courts and before Koenigsberger.

Won't Get Whole Amount

The nine banks claimed they are owed $600,000 in refunds, Koenigsburger said. They will not receive the whole amount because Koenigsburger ruled against them on other issues. He estimated, however, that they would get the major portion.

The specific amounts to be paid must now be worked out by the banks and the District or, if they can't agree, by Koenigsberger. The District cannot take an appeal until this has been done, Koenigsberger said.

Last May Koenigsberger made a similar ruling in regard to six non-national—or State—banks. Yesterday he issued a final decision in those cases, stating that the District must refund $121,174.32. District Assessor Edward A. Dent said no decision has been made on an appeal in these cases.

In the national bank cases Koenigsberger upheld Dent in including in gross earnings (1) fees received for ration banking under OPA and for cashing war savings bonds and (2) profits on sales of bonds and other securities without deducting losses from such sales.

He also upheld Dent's refusal to allow deductions for maintenance expense of property from which the banks derive rentals.

National banks that will get refunds, Koenigsberger said, include Anacostia National, Columbia National, Hamilton National, Liberty National, Lincoln National, National Capital, National Metropolitan, Riggs National and Second National. The National Bank of Washington did not appeal and will not receive a refund, he stated.

District budget officials said they had reserved funds in their 1951 budget in anticipation of such a decision. To make the payments, however, an act of Congress will be required, they said.

Chest Will Fail 520 Needing Hospital Care

Some 460 Washington residents and 60 babies, all eligible for Community Chest hospitalization, will be denied that help this year for lack of funds.

The official estimate of what this means in human terms was published yesterday in the Medical Annals of the District of Columbia, monthly publication of the District Medical Society.

It was contained in a guest editorial prepared by the Hospital Service Agency, which administers the Chest hospitalization fund.

The HSA article urged that next year's Chest allotment be made "adequate" to care for all the city's needy sick, and asked that the Chest formula for division of its funds be restudied.

"The Chest supports more than 100 agencies, all of which are worthy of community support, but the moot question is, in what order of precedence?" the article stated.

"Several prominent physicians," it continued, "have contended that a family's primary considerations are food, shelter, clothing, and provision for sickness. After those come the desirable, but less vital, benefits such as the educational and recreational activities provided by many of the Chest agencies."

The HSA viewpoint pointed out that the hospitalization fund, this year, was granted 13 percent of the money raised in the Red Feather campaign. Had the share been 17.5 percent, the article stated, "every indigent sick child and adult could have been adequately cared for."

In Adventist Talk

Punishment Held Cause Of New War

Punishment is one of society's "most stupid conceptions," Dr. Henry E. Andren, Seventh-day Adventist consultant in neuropsychiatry, told the Potomac Conference camp meeting yesterday.

"The present war is largely the result of victors of the last war punishing the conquered," he declared. "If the same stupid policy is followed in this war the results will be even worse."

Dr. Andren spoke at the afternoon session held in the Sligo Church, Flower and Carroll aves., Takoma Park, Md.

"We are living in a worry age," he said. "Men and women worry about the world situation, their jobs, their children and their religion, but the main cause of worry to the average individual is his home and family life."

Failure of human beings to get along with one another is the greatest problem of the human race, and it should be taught in school, he said.

Avoid Family Squabbles

"Differences of feeling, thought and conduct are bound to arise in families, usually giving rise to anger," Dr. Andren said. He recommended the following treatments:

"1. A man and wife should refuse to get angry at the same time.

"2. No matter how they feel, they must remain courteous.

"3. Defer actions until emotions have subsided and the counsel of wise friends has been considered.

"4. A marital crisis is seldom an emergency, and the best thing to do for the time being is nothing.

"5. Give the other fellow the benefit of the doubt.

"6. Refuse to let a state of civil war exist. If you do you cannot win.

"7. Be gentle and kind no matter how you feel.

"8. Remember two intelligent people are bound to disagree profoundly. They may both be right to some degree."

Treatment of Criminals

"A person who commits a criminal or antisocial act is generally ill. He should be treated gently and firmly and never roughly because of anger or fear."

For the sake of society, the criminal may need to be placed in quarantine either temporarily or permanently, Dr. Andren added. But our attitude should be one of "intelligent sympathy."

Teen-Agers Plan Canteen In Fairfax

Teen-agers in and around the town of Fairfax are meeting tonight to elect officers.

When they do, the Fairfax Teen-Age Canteen will come into being, in the Fairfax Scout House—a cinderblock one-story building with a floor of wood shavings and with paneless windows.

Residents hope it will correct one of the community's major ills: Lack of any public recreation facilities for adults and youths.

The idea started with a ladies' group in the Episcopal Church. They named Mrs. John H. Rust as liaison with the teen-agers. Armed with a list from Fairfax High School, she called together a representative group of teen-age students.

The canteen was proposed to them. They spread the idea to their friends. Another meeting was held, in the Scout House, and tonight's session will bring formal organization.

The Rotary Club, which owns the Scout House (built two years ago), has given permission for its use as a canteen.

One merchant has offered to take his bulldozer and clear the Scout House plot, grade it and put in a seed bed. Another has agreed to donate a fourth of the seed and sell the rest at cost. One has said he will make venetian blinds for the windows. Another has offered to replace the needed window panes.

A concession company has offered to donate the concrete necessary to lay a floor in the house—as soon as cement is available.

The original ladies' group by now has grown to include representatives of the police, as well as civic leaders in the town. An adult advisory council has been formed, headed by Police Officer J. H. Hailman.

Eventually, the adult advisory council hopes to accomplish two results: Formation of a recreation association for every person in and around the town, establishment of a recreation commission, with the same scope as the county's Planning Commission, to coordinate the area's play needs.

CESTONE, EDNA M. In loving remembrance of my dear wife, EDNA M. CESTONE, who passed away one year ago today, August 18, 1949.

Your memory is all I have now,
Your cares are all at rest;
You will never be forgotten
By the one who loved you best.

Devoted husband, PASQUALE CESTONE.

ANGELO ANASTASI, who passed away 3 years ago today.

The days that shone so brightly
Are dimmed now that you're gone;
And sights, once beauty for our eyes,
Have dulled, since you passed on.
The minutes move so heavily,
Time glides on leaden feet.
To the ancient door of Eternity
Where once more we shall meet.

Your loving wife, ANNA ANASTASI.

ANGELO ANASTASI, husband of Mrs. Anna Anastasi.

Though joys pass, their memory lingers,
In the heart, to still its pain.
At parting with some dear beloved one,
Ne'er on earth to see again.

U. N. Soviet Ouster Posed Before Legion

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Virginia Legionnaires yesterday were asked to consider whether Russia should be ejected from the United Nations, but were warned that such a course might bring a third world war.

Arnold R. Wilson of Clarksburg, W. Va., vice chairman of the national legislation committee of the American Legion, was vigorously applauded when he said the time may come "when we should ask for the withdrawal of the Soviet Union from the United Nations."

But he warned that such an action "could be the instance which would bring a full-scale third world war." If the action is not taken, however, Russia will continue to use the U. N. as an "international forum" for its propaganda purposes, he said.

Wilson's grim summary of the world situation highlighted the opening day of the thirty-second annual convention of the American Legion, Department of Virginia, at the Virginia Theater in Alexandria.

"It would be a much clearer picture," Wilson said, "if Russia resolved to go one way and we another." The time may have come for us to "say in all seriousness that a Communist is a criminal, and like a criminal should be thrown in jail. We should make certain people understand that there is no place for communism outside prison walls," he added.

Earle Cocke, jr., of Dawson, Ga., chairman of the National Security Commission of the Legion, who preceded Wilson on the platform, told Legionnaires that the cold war started back in 1944 or 1945, when "Russian forces were not needed to capture Japan."

"We are closer to the passage of universal military training than ever before," Cocke said, and urged the Virginia department to press for immediate hearings in Congress when a UMT bill is introduced.

On the subject of civil defense, Cocke warned, "You might as well expect to be bombed." He said that Russia has a B-29 which, stripped of armament, could carry a bomb load and gasoline sufficient for the big hop. "It would be a one-way mission."

Both Cocke and Wilson are candidates to become national commander of the Legion, to be chosen at a national convention in Los Angeles in October. The two men appeared unexpectedly on the convention platform yesterday, shortly after Legionnaires were told that the scheduled principal address would not be given.

Assistant Defense Secretary Paul Griffith had been slated for the speaker's role, but arrived in Washington by plane from Massachusetts too late for his scheduled appearance. Griffith told Legion officials he will speak to the convention today, when Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), also plans to appear.

The Rev. George Ossman, department chaplain, earlier conducted a memorial service before both the Legion and its auxiliary. The two units then split into separate meetings.

He told delegates that "It has become increasingly clear America is headed toward total mobilization.

The Sooner we get ready to ace the imminent threat o all-out-war, the more likely we are to survive," since America is "dangerously unprepared," he said.

"This time," the chaplain declared, "there will be neither distance nor well-armed allies to stave off the danger." He urged Legion support for universal military training in order to "develop a reservoir of trained manpower to meet the crises that apparently are going to be characteristic of the next 50 years.".

Today, the convention goes back in session at 9 a. m. to hear reports of committees and addresses by Griffith and Senator Byrd. This afternoon there will be a parade along Washington st., followed by a banquet tonight at the National Airport, when Gov. John S. Battle of Virginia will speak.

Saturday the Legion will elect a new department commander and other officers.

Yesterday, members exhibited little interest in pre-election politicking. They characterized this year's convention as the quietest in years, politics-wise. So far, no opposition has been shown to the election of Joseph Hodges of South Boston

Legion Chief Predicts Passage of UMT

Baltimore, Aug. 17 (AP).—National Commander George N. Craig of the American Legion predicted today Congress soon will pass a Universal Military Training law.

"This will be America's notice to Russia that we are not kidding," he declared.

Craig said Congress also should pass the legislation against Communists now being considered.

"I saw green, untrained, frightened, pitiful kids slaughtered on the battlefield," he said. "They were being slaughtered and butchered because the American people thought it unnecessary to train them for war."

Lemuel K. Stevens of Snow Hill, a retired Navy captain, appeared to be the only candidate for state commander.

He commanded an infantry battalion in World War II.

—When Men Were Men—

This Trafton Was Tough as They Come

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 17.—Back in the days when men were big and tough and the Republicans were running things, George Trafton was as big and tough as the biggest and toughest in Chicago.

He'd made quite a name for himself as a hellacious center on one of Rockne's hellacious Notre Dame football teams and jumped from there to the Chicago Bears to become one of the reasons they called George Halas' team the Midway Monsters.

Georgie simply was a roughhouse guy.

"You had to be to stay alive those days," he was saying today, "and believe me, bub, I lived. I look back on it as a lot of fun now, but there was nothing funny about being knocked down and trampled by Cal Hubbard in the afternoon and then going out and drinking cheap booze at night to ease the pain.

CAL HUBBARD

"The booze hurt you worse than Hubbard, so that ought to give you some idea of the kind of stuff they were peddling in the Loop in those days. Rugged, man, rugged."

Trafton, who's now public relations director for the Los Angeles Rams, had prepared for the lumps he was to get as a Bears' center and later as a fighter of sorts by being banged around with Rockne's Irish.

There was that day in Lincoln, Nebr., back in 1919 when the Irish met head-on with Nebraska's Cornhuskers.

"Hell, I only weighed 199 then and I was the biggest guy on the Notre Dame team," he began. "There was George Gipp and Dutch Bergmann. Hell, I almost weighed as much as those two combined. And there were those Nebraska guys. They were big, man, all of 'em. And they had 'em rigged out in heather green jerseys and flaming red socks.

"Talk about something looking fierce, Nebraska did that day. And they'd had that charcoal powder rubbed all over their faces and their eyes looked like two headlights in a blackout.

"Well, they kicked to us and Gipp got the ball. He took three steps, just did get out of the end zone, and wham, he was hit from about eight sides. Just before he went down he lateralled to Bergmann and the Dutchman breezed 105 yards for a touchdown. I kept up with him most of the way, but when I saw the Dutchman was gonna make it, I quit.

"Just as I did, wham, I was smacked down by four or five of those Cornhuskers, and I thought the stadium had fallen in on me. There was blood coming from about 85 holes in me, and I've always been scared stiff at the sight of blood.

"Rock told me it wasn't blood that was on my face, but just pieces of cloth from the red stockings the Nebraska players wore. May have been, but I've never seen liquid cloth since then."

Skip over the next four or five years and move Trafton from South Bend to Chicago and the Bears, if you will, and here's where the fun really begins.

There was a ballplayer on the Chicago White Sox team who fancied himself as a fighter. He'd knocked out his manager, Lena Blackburne, out in St. Louis. Fellow's name was Art Shires, remember?

Big Trafton, he was carrying 250 pounds on his six-five frame now, was soon to meet Shires, who was knocking guys stiff, some of them legitimately so, in Chicago rings.

"We had a tackle named Cy Murray on the Bears at the time," Trafton started off again. "He was a big guy who liked his booze, and at this particular time Halas had us barnstorming. We played something like 8 games in 11 days.

"WELL, ONE NIGHT Murray got oiled up, walked up and down the train and threatened to punch everybody in the nose and generally overhaul all of us. He was like that when he had a few. Somebody told him if he wanted to fight, why not fight Shires, who was getting a ton of publicity. Murray, after three more swigs out of that pint, agreed.

"All hell broke loose the next day. The papers got hold of the story and Murray was scared stiff. Said he couldn't go through with it, that he was going with a society dame over in Oak Park, that she wouldn't stand for it.

"Well, I'd had a few snifters in me and I volunteered. Figured he couldn't kill me, and besides, I'd be getting paid for a fight for a change.

"So I take this dame with me to a fight club in White City, near Chicago, where the Great Shires is fighting one night. He's got Arthur (The Great) Shires written all over that robe of his, and his seconds had it on their sweaters. He popped that punk he was fighting in the first round. That one looked on the up and up, and Shires had won another first-round kayo.

"I was to be next. I was still playing with the Bears. So I ran up and down the football field in the morning and then hustled over to a gym and trained for the fight in the afternoon.

"I entered the ring and two guys showed up as my seconds. I didn't know them and they didn't know me. For protection, I had the Chicago Bears squad in the first three ringside rows.

"MY SECONDS told me, 'Don't go after him, let him come to you. Just box him.' Hell, I didn't know the difference between a left hook and a right tackle. Well, the bell rang, and I must admit I was scared stiff.

"I threw a little jab and Shires did nothing. Then all of a sudden he hauled off and tagged me with his Sunday punch—a helluva right hand smack on the chin. I didn't move back an inch. If that was his best punch, I said to myself, baby, you belong to me.

"Then I started. I threw everything but George Halas at him, knocked him down nine times and finally won on a fourth-round K. O.

"This fightin' is easy, I decided, so I had six more fights—all against football or baseball players—and I stopped 'em all. Man, I was something.

"Finally they matched me with Primo Carnera over in Kansas City. Well, to make a long story short and not go in the details of the arguments, Carnera knocked me out in the first round, the record book says.

"That was the kid's last fight. I picked up my $7800 and retired as a fighter. Eight fights, eight knockouts, and I was the victim, if that's what you want to call it, only once.

"They wanted me to fight again. I told 'em I'll fight any football player or baseball player you can dig up, but I ain't fightin' no fighter. I'm no fighter, I'm a lover."

Redskins Trade Stickel to Eagles For 1951 Draftee

Los Angeles, Aug. 17—The Washington Redskins today traded a player they couldn't sign for a player whose name they don't even know.

They sent Tackle Walt Stickel to the Philadelphia Eagles for the Eagles' second draft choice in 1951. Stickel was traded to the Redskins by the Chicago Bears for Tree Adams and Fullback Jim Spavitalli. Stickel, in the television business in Philadelphia, refused to join the Redskins.

Redskins Want 35-Player Limit

Los Angeles, Aug. 17.—The Washington Redskins tonight requested Commissioner Bert Bell of the National Football League to increase the player limit from 32 to 35.

"This is an emergency, a real war emergency" Generalissimo G. Preston Marshal, of the football forces, told Bell over long distance in Philadelphia. Bell said he would poll other club presidents on the demand.

Timonium Sale Considered by Jockey Club

Baltimore, Aug. 17 (AP). — The Maryland Jockey Club announced tonight it is "seriously considering" sale of its major stock holdings in the Timonium track and State Fair Grounds.

The jockey club also operates Pimlico and Laurel race tracks.

Out-of-state interests have made an offer to buy the entire Timonium property for use as an industrial site.

The jockey club said in a statement, sale of Timonium is being considered to help meet the costs of expansion at Pimlico.

And a club spokesman said in answer to a reporter's question that it would not refuse to consider an offer "at the right price" for its controlling interest in Laurel.

Rizzuto's Error Ruins One-Hitter By Reynolds

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Usually infallible Phil Rizzuto ruined a magnificent one-hit pitching performance by Allie Reynolds with a ghastly error in the eighth inning, and the Nats swarmed in to put over two runs and beat the Yankees, 2-1, yesterday at Griffith Stadium.

With two outs, nobody on, and the Yanks leading, 1-0, in the eighth, Rizzuto bobbled a hard grounder by Nats' pitcher Sid Hudson. Eddie Yost followed with a single, and Gil Coan with a tremendous two-run triple to the centerfield bullpen.

Those two hits, and a scratchy single by Sherry Robertson in the seventh inning were the only hits the Nats could scrounge off the fastballing Reynolds all day.

But they proved enough to gain Hudson his 11th victory against 10 losses. Hudson was mighty tough, too, spacing out six hits and holding the New Yorkers to only two singles in the last six innings.

With their victory, the Nats achieved an even break against New York in their four-game series. And perhaps even more significant, it was Washington's fiftieth triumph for the season, recorded in their 109th game. Last year, the eighth-place Nats didn't win their fiftieth until the final game of the season.

It was a patched-up up Nats lineup with Mickey Vernon and Sam Mele, their two first basemen, out with injuries. Centerfielder Irv Noren took over the bag. Sherry Robertson, an infielder, moved to the outfield.

Further complications set in in the seventh inning when second baseman Cass Michaels was chased by Umpire Ed Hurley for arguing too vehemently over a called strike, and Robertson had to take over second and Johnny Ostrowski replaced Sherry in the outfield.

Bauer Injured, DiMaggio Returns

An injury to Outfielder Hank Bauer yesterday forced the return to the Yankee lineup of Joe DiMaggio against Washington at Griffith Stadium.

The return of DiMag brought a great roar from the crowd, about half of which were youngsters. DiMag didn't get to bat, but he handled one chance in the field.

—It Paid Off Against Rams—

Redskins Will Be Trying Something New This Season—Gaining by Running With Ball

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 17—The Washington Redskins are going to try something new this season—advancing the football by running with it.

For the Redskins, it's almost a revolutionary step. They've relied on practicaly nothing except Sammy Baugh's good right arm for so long that many fans suspected the Redskins were under the impression that a running game was against the rules.

Last night, however, the Redskins found out that it was entirely legal. They upset the Los Angeles Rams, two-touchdown favorites, 17-14, and they did it principally because they controlled the ball most of the game with their running attack.

The Redskins passed only 10 times—by far the lowest number of aerials the Redskins have tried since Baugh joined them, in 1937.

Their ground game was not brilliant but it was effective. The Rams thought, and they had every reason in the world to do so on the Redskins' past performances, that the Washingtonians would run one play, pass twice and then punt. But the Redskins fooled them.

With the Rams employed in a four-man line, the Redskins made the most of it. They cracked through the middle often enough to force the Rams into a six and later a seven-man line. Then they passed.

"In the past, the opposition knew what we would do—pass, pass and pass," Coach Herman Ball said today. "That made their task almost a cinch. If a coach knows what the other teams is going to do, he's sitting pretty.

"We're going to try and change that this year. We think we've got the tools to do it with. Bill Dudley, Frankie Spaniel, Eddie Saenz, Harry Dowda and Harry Gilmer are good runners. Why not let them run?"

Gilmer, who's beginning to live up to his 1945 All-America clippings, had the Rams in a sweat several times. The solid 170-pounder would drift back to pass, and when he observed the Rams' defenders had his intended receivers covered, Harry did the logical thing—he ran with the ball. In the past, he's been throwing it recklessly, most of the times into the hands of the opposition.

Last night he ran four times, three on optional plays on which he could have passed if his receivers were available, and one on an intended run. He averaged 7 yards a crack.

Dudley, well, Dudley was Dudley and that's usually brilliant. He scored 11 points last night with a touchdown, a 30-yard field goal and two extra points.

In between times, he did a great job on defense. He showed only one weakness. He failed to catch a pass Baugh intended for Hugh Taylor. It was 20 yards over Dudley's head, but he gave it a try nevertheless.

MORRIS SIEGEL.

Five Have 69s, Tie for Second; Fazio at 77

By George Bowen

Baltimore, Aug. 17 (AP).—Clayton Heafner toured the Mount Pleasant course for a record-breaking 65 to take the lead in today's first 18 holes of the Eastern Open golf tourney.

The former Army sergeant with five European battle stars, now a portly 225 pounds, shaved seven strokes off par. That was two strokes better than the former record of 67 set in 1938 by Cliff Spencer, of Elizabeth City, N. C.

His approach shots were well-nigh perfect and "right up to the hole" as Heafner said. The longest putt he sank was seven feet as he corraled eight birdies, five of them on the second nine.

Heafner's only trouble of the round was on the ninth, where he took thre putts for his only excursion over par by a stroke. That left him two below par 36 for the first nine and he reeled off a 31 on the nine holes coming in.

He had opportunities for two more birdies, missing a five-foot putt on the sixteenth and a 12-footer on the seventeenth.

Nearest to the casual and unprepossessing Heafner with 69 apiece were Fred Haas, jr., Claremont, Calif.; John Palmer, Baden, N. C.; Buck White, Ormond Beach, Fla.; Walter Romans, Baltimore, and Earl Stewart, jr., Dallas.

Par of 72 was the dividing line between the first 20 low scorers and the rest of the field of 125. After they shoot another 18 holes tomorrow the 60 low scorers will carry on for 36 holes more Saturday and Sunday.

There was a bunching up at 70 by Pete Cooper, Ponte Vedra, Fla., Marty Furgol, New York Mills, N. Y.; Al Houghton, Landover, Md.; Otto Greiner, Baltimore; Bill Nary, Chino, Calif., and Rod Munday, York, Pa.

Baird Rides 3 Winners, 5 in 2 Days

Despite being overlooked in the betting, she scrambled home with speed to spare and seven lengths in front of the closest opposition in a field of 10.

The crowd of 5,000 saw E. F. Brining's Goodrob finish second and a half-length in advance of D. T. Swidler's Ever Message. The big disappointment of the field was R. N. Boerner's Saints Rest, winner of three straight at Charles Town. The 4-year-old was a distant trailer throughout.

It was to the tune of a $27.20 mutuel that Ante Maker turned in her fourth victory in 14 starts this year. She was handled by J. C. Lauer and stepped the mile and a sixteenth in 1:46 4/5 over a fast track and under clear skies.

The entry of Greenbowler and Ever Message tried to give the field the one-two punch. Greenbowler held most of the pace and was up to Ever Message to come from behind.

However, Ante Maker beat Ever Message to the punch, taking command leaving the back stretch. From that point to the wire the winner was not in doubt. Ever Message hung in the stretch and could not catch Goodrob for second money.

Jockey Jim Baird who rode his first winner in India during World War II was the day's riding hero. He won three races, giving him five for the two days of the sport. Jimmy took the second race with George Perry's Moose Pone, a $4 favorite, which put the finishing touches on a $22.60 daily double.

Baird came back in the third event to score with W. M. Hoffman's Miss M. T., paying $6.60, and also accounted for the seventh race with D. Morello's Goldton, paying $6.20.

At Bel Air.

Dear Folks:

"I went fishing four times on the bay and I didn't catch a hardhead" moaned a fan. "No wonder the darned horse couldn't run." The horse he bet was named Hard Head. Bowie will distribute $257,000 in purses during its 12-day meeting opening September 30. The track will have a $2000 minimum purse and the money has been okayed by both the racing commission and the horsemen's association.

See you on the rail.—BILL.

Boating Goes Big League This Weekend, 5 Major Events Slated in Area

Speed Kings Perform on Miles River

By Happy Walker

When it comes to boating events in and around Washington, it's either a feast or a famine. This week it's a feast with just about everything in a boating way over the next three days.

The power boys head for the Miles River Regatta at St. Michaels, Md., tomorrow and Sunday. The main event on the sailing calendar will be the Corsica River annual regatta also on the eastern shore. The Star internationals at Chicago will attract several area contestants.

Droves of area skippers will be on hand at Maryland Yacht Club, Fairview, Md., for the three-day Fifth District rendezvous of the United States Power Squadrons, while last but not least, is the windup of the pre-eastern championship rowing regatta, off Potomac Boat Club on Sunday.

For a quarter of a century, the Miles River Regatta, which will attract most of the area speed kings tomorrow and Sunday, has been titled the Queen of Chesapeake Bay regattas. Tomorrow's program gets under way with a full slate of inboard service runabouts, the John Bramble trophy race and the Dodson Memorial trophy race.

This year at Miles River the sail and power regattas are split into two weekends. The sailing regatta was held two weeks ago.

Representing the bay area at the Star international classic starting Monday at Chicago, will be Washington's David J. Dunigan, jr., who sails out of Gibson Island.

Many of Washington's sailing clan will trail their boats across Sandy Point ferry for the widely tauted Corsica River sailing regatta at Centerville, Md., on the eastern shore tomorrow and Sunday.

Comets, Thistles, Penguins, Chesapeake 20s, Lightnings, Star and Cruising classes are included in the two-day triple header.

Here at home, the Potomac Boat Club will play host to the final inter-club rowing regatta in preparation for the eastern championship at Worcester, Mass., September 3.

Old Dominion Boat Club and the Virginia Boat Club will have their top seeded crews on hand to prime for the eastern meet along with the host club.

Fishing Fair, Fish Calling Contest and All, Opens Today

By Ralph Murdock

The Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair at Crisfield, Md., on the basis of reservations and early arrivals, promises to be Maryland's outstanding water event of the year.

The fishing contest starts today at dawn and closes at 10 p. m. Saturday night with the firing of the Coast Guard guns. Sunday afternoon the boat parade will be held and the trophies presented by Gov. William P. Lane, jr., of Md.

Murdock

There will be tours to Smith and Tangier Islands, a "Bay Billie" band will go to sea and entertain anglers out on the fishing grounds, and (believe it or not) a fish calling contest.

The closing event will be the giant crab feast at which the people of Crisfield will be hosts to the visitors. You can eat yourself even at this typical Chesapeake Bay country event.

THE BLUEFISH have been appearing in greater numbers during the week near Sharp's Light on the eastern shore of the Chesapeake Bay. A top catch of 146 blues, 1 rock and 3 hardheads was recorded by Capt. Bert Lamb Wednesday afternoon.

Another boat from the Rod'n Reel Club skippered by Rudy Bennett, aboard the Skippy, docked with 46 blues and 1 hardhead.

Braving a 20 mile southwester Mr. and Mrs. Barney Barnett, owners of the Knotty Pine Food Shop at Deale, Md., came in with 44 blues and 22 rock under the guidance of Capt. Doyle Kendall. Fishing on Wednesday is a must with the Barnetts.

Where They Are Biting

Week-end suggestions:

BLUEFISH: Sharp's Light on the Eastern Shore. Better catches here. Lushby No. 3 lures and No. 1 Nungesser spoons are good baits. Use pork rind on the former.

TROUT: Cornfield Harbor in the lower Potomac. Peeler crab is a top bait for the species.

ROCK: Solomon's Island is tops. Trolling has taken the place of chumming due to shrimp scarcity.

Boys Club Downs American Legion In Series Opener

Washington Boys' Club defeated American Legion Post 139 by 8 to 6 yesterday on the Ellipse in the first of a three-game series for the District Junior championship. They play again at 5 p. m. today on the East Ellipse. Winner of the series leaves Monday for Johnstown, Pa., for the All-American Junior tournament.

Dale Summerbell's triple with two on in the eighth inning broke a 6-6 tie and gave the Boys' Club its victory.

Carpousis Wins Tennis Title

Unseeded Dr. Aris Carpousis won the Arlington Recreation Department tennis tournament at the Four-Mile Run Playground yesterday, beating third-seeded Richard Funk, 7—5, 1—6, 6—1, 6—1, in a match that was halted by darkness Tuesday.

Carpousis, who eliminated second-ranked Russell Fessenden and fourth-seeded Harry Green in the early rounds, wasted little time in disposing of his third top-ranking opponent of the tourney. Leading 2-1 in the fourth set when play was resumed, Carpousis swept through the first four games to take the championship.

AAU Meeting Off

The outing originally scheduled tomorrow by the board of managers of the District of Columbia AAU has been indefinitely postponed because of the death of James A. "Pappy" Sullivan, a charter member of the organization.

FBI Ties For Lead, 13-1

The Federal Bureau of Investigation tied Northeast Bodyworks for the second half Departmental League championship by trouncing the Washington Gas Co., 13-1, yesterday on the Ellipse and will play off the tie at 5 p.m. today on the South Ellipse.

Bolster Wins Two Matches, Wolfe Out

Wolfe won a 1 up victory over John Brown of Lexington, Ky., in an early morning finish to their darkness-delayed second round match.

Nats Squeak by Yanks, 2-1, On Coan's 2-Run Triple pitch-hitters, Johnny Mize and Tommy Henrich, failed them in the eighth and ninth inning when the droopiest kind of single would have put the win in the New York column.

In the eighth, a single by Yogi Berra and walks by Joe Collins and Gerry Coleman loaded the bases with one out. Mize was wheeled in to bat for rookie Jackie Jensen, but he sent up a little foul to Yost, and Reynolds struck out as Hudson bore down.

In the ninth, Robertson's error and Berra's single put the tying run on second and the winning run on first with two outs.

Submarine-balling Hudson ran into two other cases of trouble in the early innings. In the second, Noren's error, Bill Johnson's single and Coleman's walk filled the bases with one out, but Sid struck out Jensen and Reynolds.

And in the third, the Yankees put over their run which, until Rizzuto's fatal error, appeared to be enough to win. Singles by Rizzuto, Bauer and Collins did the trick.

Reynolds was doing even better. For six innings, the only Nats to get on base were Stewart twice and Yost and Dente once each with walks. The Nats made nothing resembling to a hit, and Reynolds recorded seven strikeouts.

Then with one out in the seventh, Robertson hit one into the dirt to the right of Gerry Coleman. The Yankee second baseman lost his footing, recovered and made his throw, but Robertson was safe as the crowd cheered. It was scored a single.

The lower bracket semifinalists are Mae Murray, the Rutland (Vt.) youngster, and Mrs. Maurice Glick of Baltimore, Md.

Miss Murray downed Patty Mac Kinnon of Dallas, Tex., 2 and 1 and Mrs. Glick won one-up on the eighteenth green over Grace de Moss of Corvallis, Oreg.

'Broken Arrow'

Apache Warrior Shines In a Moving Western

By Sonia Stein

Having long ago discovered the beauty of the Southwest, the movies have now also discovered the beauty of some of its people. In "Broken Arrow" which is now at the Palace, the story is strong and moving, but more moving still are the two leading Apache Indian figures. The fact that neither one is really an Indian doesn't matter here, because that's what they are alleged to be and they are outstandingly handsome and dignified people.

Richard L. Coe is on vacation. His column will be resumed on his return.

Jeff Chandler who plays Cochise, the head of the Apache tribes, is a big, bronze warrior. Debra Paget is a slim, bronze maiden. Both of them turn in excellent performances. Chandler dominates the picture, although James Stewart is its star. Wise, honest and trustworthy is this chief of the warring Apaches. And he will not make peace with the white men until he has reason to think they are the same.

Miss Paget is a gentle and lovely young girl who falls in love with an emissary from the world of white men, a scout who tries to make peace between the tribes and the United States Government.

The least attractive of the people involved is Stewart, who plays the scout. It is a shade beyond understanding how the Indian girl could fall in love with this man who is well into his prime if not past it, since he bears so little physical resemblance to the broad-shouldered, strong-face braves. His character, however, is sterling, and it may be she could read between the lines in his tired old face.

The story itself is admirable. The old tale of the Indian vs. the white man is told with a broad sympathy for the dwindling Indian tribes, fighting to protect their land from the invader who pours into the land in never ending number. The Indians here are no Ugh Ugh Indians, nor terrifyig scalpers. They are real people with real minds and hearts. The wedding ceremony as shown between Miss Paget and Stewart might well be a model for use elsewhere, except for the painful gesture of slicing a nick in each party's finger so their blood might run together. But for dramatic value in a film, it is wonderful, and the words accompanying it are poetry.

Stewart, to give him his due, plays the role of Tom Jeffords with considerable feeling and far less of the big bashful boy quality than is usual with him. He's finally matured, and I hope none of the admirers of his former hangdog charm mind too much.

This is a picture children should see. There are enough ambush and hard riding shots to please them, and it would be nice for them to understand that there are two sides to this, Indians vs. the white man story. For adults, it has a beauty for the eye and for the heart. It's something ar beyond a routine tale of the opening of the West. "Broken Arrow" also has a moral, gently explained although never spun out. Cochise knows that Jeffords and his Indian wife will not find it easy to adjust in any society, since one will always be a curiosity and an outcast. But they never find this out because one of them dies before peace is effected between the warring elements. But I think much of the audience will see it feel badly about it for a few minutes and maybe—just maybe—bear it in mind when they get outside the theater.

Although the story is gently unfolded, in the midst of tremendous Technicolor splendor, it's dramatic and well paced. Michael Blankfort did the script with restraint, managing to indicate that the characters are not speaking English, although English is of course what they speak in the picture. Ernest Palmer's camera work is superb and Delmar Daves who directed must be very pleased with himself at this point.

"BROKEN ARROW" at the Palace Theater. A Twentieth Century-Fox film produced by Julian Blaustein and directed by Delmer Daves. Script by Michael Blankfort from a novel by Elliott Arnold.

Army Spuds Cost $2.95; Surplus Sale Brings 1 Cent

Representative Charles W. Vursell (R., Ill.) yesterday said the Army has bought 23,500,000 pounds of potatoes at $2.95 a hundredweight in the past month, while the Agriculture Department has been buying them at $1.68 and reselling them for fertilizer at one cent.

The purpose of his potato arithmetic, he told the House, was to show that the Agriculture Department should sell surplus food to the armed services. This is authorized by law, Vursell said.

In the same period, he said, the services have spent six million dollars in the open market. This included purchases of 60 million eggs at 40 cents a dozen and "millions of pounds" of butter and cheese.

Clearing House Session

Montpelier, Vt., Aug. 17 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, commanding general of the Forty-Third Division, said today that the division, which is to be activated September 5, will move to Camp Pickett, Va., between September 10 and 14.

At the Warner

'Pretty Baby' Is Good; Betsy Drake Wows 'Em

By Orval Hopkins

IT IS my pleasure unalloyed (and this sort of thing has got to stop) to record that "Pretty Baby," the comedy at the Warner, is funny and that it afforded these straining orbs the enjoyment of the best performance by a young actress they have had in many a dreary hour in the theater.

The young actress is Betsy Drake, a lady who I understand is married to Cary Grant, the actor. Miss Drake displays not only a keen sense of comedy, but also a conception of timing and a willingness to accept direction which would become many an older actress. She has a sort of "raw-meat" voice reminiscent of Margaret Sullavan. It may be, of course, that to this extent she is aping Miss Sullavan. If so, let Maggie get off those oars and row. The little lady has got it.

A second person to make this movie a pleasure is Edmund Gwenn. Gwenn—as the faithful will attest, usually plays the twinkle-eyed, heart-o'-gold type. They've thrown him a change of pace this time and he belts it for three bases. Gwenn is delightful as a bad-tempered manufacturer of baby food.

Also in this is Zachary Scott, an actor I normally esteem as I would the grubs now fattening on my tomato plants. Somebody has kept him in hand and he is doing fine. Fine for Scott, anyway. He made me laugh once and I hope he becomes aware of this triumph.

Dennis Morgan also is in "Pretty Baby." He is entirely adequate.

The story, if I can distill it here, is about a young lady who, in order to procure a seat on the subway, pretends she is carrying a baby. She tells an old man on the subway that she has named the boy for Cyrus Baxter, the baby food king. Needless to say, the old man, unbeknownst to her, IS Baxter. He is enchanted with the idea and things snowball from there.

It's preposterous. It's a pleasure. It was written by Harry Kurnitz and Everett Freeman and directed by Bretaigne Windust. They'll have to share the week's extra ration of weinerschnitzel, however, with Miss Betsy Drake.

The Bugs Bunny cartoon is fine. The newsreel has a great shot of Eddie LeBaron, the ex-Redskin, dodging all those behemoths and flinging the touchdown pass to Charlie Justice in the recent All-Star game.

Dr. Ransom Miles Sherman, without question the funniest man who ever worked in radio and who now has a daily television show, is in "Pretty Baby." They gave him a bad deal in Hollywood for sure.

The Annapolis Theater-in-the-Round is presenting Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie" tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Severn Room of Carvel Hall, Annapolis.

North Branch Of Potomac Falls To Four-Year Low

The north branch of the Potomac River has fallen to a four-year record low in the rain-short western Maryland area, the Associated Press reported from Cumberland yesterday.

R. R. Golden, weather observer at Cumberland, said the river has been falling at the rate of .02 inches a day, and was slightly below the September 1946 low of 2.70 feet. Normally the river at this point runs about 3.75 feet.

In Washington, Bennett Swenson, chief of the River Services Section, Weather Bureau, said the Potomac is "running low, but not seriously. We have had it lower."

Because the tides create a pool-like condition here, Swenson said, the effect is not noticeable below Chain Bridge.

D. C. Red Cross Unit To Move Temporarily

The production and supply service of the District Red Cross will move to Walsh House, 2020 Massachusetts ave. nw. on Monday to allow remodeling of the District Red Cross Chapter House, 1730 E st. nw.

Mrs. Roderick W. McKinnon, jr., chairman of the production and supply service, said members of the sewing and knitting units should call for their materials at Walsh House after Monday.

Low Bid Is $142,438

The Blake Construction Co. of Washington was lowest of seven bidders on construction of the proposed eight-room addition to the Landover Hills, Md., Elementary School.

The low bid of $142,438 was some $20,000 more than the cost estimated by the Prince Georges Board of Education.

Award of the contract was held up until Wednesday at 8 p. m., when the board will meet to open bids on the four-room addition to Columbia Park Elementary School.

Surplus Property Sales Frozen in Defense Move

Chairman Lyndon B. Johnson (D., Tex.) of the Senate Armed Services preparedness subcommittee, announced the action had been taken by Jess Larson, chief of the General Services Administration, the Government's "housekeeping" agency.

Johnson said Larson had told him both real and personal property will be held as is until a thorough study shows whether the items can be used in the defense effort.

Sex Offenders Face Loss of Right To Forfeit $25

A new policy which would prevent sex offenders from forfeiting collateral at precinct stations will be made public within the next few days, District Court Chief Judge George P. Barse said yesterday.

His announcement followed revelation by Municipal Court Judge Ellen K. Raedy that she had proposed that police be instructed to require $300 cash collateral or $500 bond in sex charges. She made the proposal at a conference of District and Municipal Court judges.

At present persons arrested for minor sexual misconduct are permitted to forfeit $25 on disorderly conduct charges.

New Cook Book on the Way

Alexandria Will Share Its Treasured Recipes

MRS. HENRY VOGES, co-editor of the Christ Church Cookbook, cuts the beautiful chocolate veneer cake she made for the tea and gives a piece to 6-year-old Judy Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Smith of Alexandria

By Tom Kelly—The Washington Post

HER grandmother's recipe was used by Miss Elizabeth Snowden (right) in making the cup sponge cakes she offers to Mrs. Robert Duncan at the recent Christ Church Cookbook tea in Alexandria

By Lucia Brown

A COOKBOOK from Alexandria—where the tradition of gracious living is as "deep rooted as the gnarled trees and giant boxwood" —will make its debut this fall.

Hostesses of the historic old city will share their knowledge of good food with the public in a cookbook to be issued by the Women's Auxiliary of Christ Episcopal Church. It will contain some 200 recipes—ancient and modern—some of which were previewed at a tea last Saturday in Christ Church Rectory.

"We've tried to translate the old recipes into modern cooking terminology where possible," says Mrs. Henry Voges, co-editor of the cookbook. "And we've tried to include recipes that are favorites with today's hostesses, too."

In it will be contributions from Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, Mrs. Thurman Arnold and the wives of many other figures in official Washington. There'll also be such old-time recipes as the one for "My Grandmother's Sponge Cake," donated by Miss Elizabeth Snowden, and an ancient Virginia wedding cake recipe given by Mrs. H. A. Latane. Another will be for the punch that's served at the dances of the Alexandria Junior Assembly, an organization first formed in Colonial days. And there's one from a male contributor, William Ketland, for a planked shad which is said to be practically boneless when served.

The cookbook is being issued by the Dietz Press down in Richmond. It will go on sale in October for the benefit of the 177-year-old church which George Washington once attended. It's said to be the first collection of local recipes in the 200 years of Alexandria's history to be published and distributed on a Nation-wide basis.

Dishes made by recipes in the volume, to be titled "A Cookbook from Christ Church" were served and sold at last Saturday's tea. To share the preview with you, we brought a few of them for this column:

MY GRANDMOTHER'S SPONGE CAKE

(Miss Elizabeth Snowden)

Take any even number of eggs
The weight of the eggs in sugar
½ the weight of the eggs in flour
Grated lemon rind and juice to taste

Beat the yolks and add the sugar and lemon. Beat the whites very stiff and add to mixture. Last of all fold in the flour very carefully (do not beat) and bake in greased and floured muffin pans or angel cake pan in moderate oven. Six eggs makes about two dozen muffin cakes.

ALEXANDRIA JUNIOR ASSEMBLY PUNCH

32 ounces gingerale (1 large bottle)
32 ounces apple juice
16 ounces raspberry syrup

Mix apple juice and raspberry syrup well in large punch bowl. Chill for 20 minutes. Add gingerale and serve in punch cups. Serves 20 to 25 cups.

PLANKED SHAD

(William Ketland)

Split shad down back from top in cleaning. Spread flat and nail to plank with roofing nails or staples. When all have been nailed to plank, cover with fine mesh chicken wire and nail. Salt fish well.

Let fire burn down to hot coals. Stand planks near fire, perpendicular to the direction the wind is blowing. Baste fish frequently with mixture of lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce, butter, and salt. Cook 1 to 1½ hours until fish is brown.

JEFF DAVIS PIE

(Mrs. Thurman Arnold)

3 eggs
6 crackers
1 cup sugar
¾ cup sour cream
Butter size of a walnut

Cream beaten yolks with 1 cup of sugar. Add crackers crumbled fine and sour cream. Cook in double boiler until smooth, adding butter. Put in unbaked crust and bake slowly. Add a meringue when custard is done.

COLD CUCUMBER SOUP

(Mrs. Martin Goodman)

3 cucumbers
3 tablespoons butter
4 cups milk
1 medium onion
3 tablespoons flour
Salt, pepper and mace to taste

Peel cucumbers, cut in small pieces and remove large seed. Saute in butter 10 minutes with chopped onion. Add flour and stir well, but be careful not to let the flour brown. Add milk and seasonings, stir until soup thickens. Remove from fire and rub through coarse sieve. Chill and serve garnished with chopped parsley, or, better still, the finely cut-up tops of spring onions.

BAKED HAM

(Dolly P. Shepperson)

Trim skin from ham, place on rack in roasting pan, put in enough water to reach rack (quantity depends on size of pan and height of rack.) Pour over ham 1 teacup of sherry wine. Sprinkle thick with black pepper, ground cloves, and brown sugar. Place cover over pan and bake 20 minutes to the pound in moderate oven, 325 to 350 degress, the lower temperature for smaller hams.

CLARET CONSOMME

(Mrs. H. Henry Fowler)

1 quart consomme
1½ cups Claret wine
1 tablespoon sugar
Red vegetable coloring
Thin slice of lemon
Small piece stick cinnamon

Cook 1½ cups Claret with a small piece of cinnamon bark and one tablespoon sugar for 10 minutes. Add to consomme. Add a small amount of red fruit coloring. Garnish with thin slice of lemon. Serves 6 to 8.

WEDDING CAKE

(Mrs. H. A. Latane)

1 pound butter
1 pound brown sugar
12 eggs
1 cup molasses
1 pound flour
4 teaspoons cinnamon
4 teaspoons allspice
1½ teaspoons mace
1 nutmeg, grated
¼ teaspoon soda
3 pounds seeded raisins, cut in pieces
2 pounds Sultana raisins
1½ pounds citron, thinly sliced and cut in strips
1 pound currants
½ pound preserved lemon rind
½ pound preserved orange rind
1 tablespoon hot water
1 cup grape juice or brandy
4 squares chocolate, melted

Cream, butter, add sugar gradually, and beat thoroughly. Beat the egg yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Add to first mixture. Then add flour (reserving 1/3 cup to dredge fruit) mixed and sifted with spices, fruit dredged with flour, lemon rind, and orange rind finely chopped, grape juice or brandy, chocolate and egg whites stiffly beaten. Just before putting into pans, add soda dissolved in hot water.

Cover pans with buttered paper. If to be steamed, cover loosely with buttered paper and tie paper firmly in place. Then steam 3 hours and bake 1½ hours in slow oven (300 degrees.) If desired, bake 4 hours in very slow oven (275 degrees) without steaming. Rich fruit cake is always more satisfactory if part of the cooking is accomplished by steaming. Spread cake with almond paste, moistened with egg white. When firm, frost and decorate as desired.

THE same punch that's served at the Alexandria Junior Assembly dances was on the menu at the tea in the garden of Christ Church Rectory. • Here, Mrs. Harry A. Councilor, (left), president of the Christ Church Woman's Auxiliary, and Mrs. B. B. Comer Lile, wife of the rector, enjoy a cup of it and a well-earned rest near the close of the afternoon. Miss Florence King passes the punch—the recipe for which is included in "A Cookbook from Christ Church"

For Summer Salads

Use escarole in summer vegetable salads often. This vegetable, along with other dark green leaf vegetables is an excellent source of vitamin A. A generous serving of escarole will supply about a day's requirement of this important vitamin.

Sandwich Spread

To make cream cheese and watercress sandwich spread, you need about one and one half bunches of watercress to a three-ounce package of cream cheese. Chop the watercress fine, mix the cream cheese until it is soft and fluffy, and then mix the two together thoroughly. Spread the sandwich bread with mayonnaise before adding the filling.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Young Widow and Boy, 23, Have Been Sweethearts For More Than a Year; She Wants Marriage, Saying They're Ideally Suited, But He Won't Agree to It

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a widow of 25, and for 14 months I have been going with a man who is now 23. I love him very much and he says he loves me too. The problem is that although he says he loves me as he has never loved before, he cannot make up his mind to get married. He says he isn't ready yet.

John lives alone in a small furnished apartment, and I too have an apartment, furnished with my own things. Each of us has a good job, and I feel that inasmuch as he has no family in this city, and since we are so much in love, it would be simpler if we got married.

We have been very close in the time we have gone together. We see each other constantly and he has supper every night with me at my apartment, not giving me or himself a chance to see or do anything different. When I speak of marriage, he either changes the subject or doesn't answer, except to say that he doesn't know when he will be ready to marry.

I feel that he is truthful when he says he loves me, and I honestly want us to be together, as I feel very lonely at times and want to run away from it all. I hope you will be able to tell me how to make John realize that any two people who are as well mated in every way and as much in love as we are, should get married. Please answer soon.

L. R.

Lad Can't 'See' Her as His Wife

DEAR L. R.: It seems to me that you and John are separated by irreconcilable misunderstanding of each other's psychology. And it is my impression that marriage between you is out of the question, no longer in the cards, if indeed the possibility ever existed in John's thoughts.

Reading between the lines of your letter, I gather that you are drifting in an affair. Your naive claim to being well mated in every way implies as much. And I think that from John's viewpoint, which he is either unable or unwilling to verbalize, that your participation in this type of relationship disqualifies you to be his wife, no matter how emotional he feels about you.

Whether or not it makes sense, the average unmarried man of immature mind tends to classify all personable young women as good or bad, and to feel that sex experience marks the great difference. Thus involuntarily he assays the young widow or divorcee through cynical rather than sympathetic eyes.

Bachelors Are Cynical Suitors

ACCORDING to the green bachelor's way of thinking, the young widow or divorcee is potentially licentious, per se, probably. Therefore if she, in excessive loneliness, mistakenly yields to his experimental bid for a liaison, she thoroughly hangs herself in his estimation, by "proving his theory"—even though the potentials of true love may have been theirs, and could have been developed in conventional courtship.

No doubt something of the sort accounts for your failure with John, who balks at marriage despite loving you. He has an "ideal" image of his wife-to-be, and marrying a mistress doesn't square with the picture. There's no use fighting that state of mind. You can't change it by pleading or argument.

John doesn't know how right he is, in saying he's not ready to marry yet. He is extraordinarily unfit for the helpmeet role—as witness his greedy, dependent, opportunistic exploitation of your wistful devotion. In restricting your social life to closeted home-evenings with him, in using your apartment as a hang-out and food bar every night, he is behaving destructively as regards you. And in self defense you should call quits on the futile arrangement—that is costing you heartache and wasted years.

M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Every Day's a Fete For Some D.C. Folk

By Elizabeth Maguire

EVERY day's a holiday in Washington, at least for someone. It was Indonesia's turn to celebrate yesterday, making the third major fete this week marking a national holiday. Pakistan celebrated on Monday and the Dominican Republic celebrated on Wednesday.

The Ambassador of Indonesia and Mme. Sastroamidjojo received their guests from 7 to 10 p. m. in the Mayflower ballroom. Mme. Sastroamidjojo wore a frock distinctly Indonesian—a kebaja or blouse of black lace embroidered with silver, a kain or skirt of batik, and red flowers pinned in her black hair.

Although it was the fifth anniversary for the republic, it was the first independence celebration to be held in the United States. And the new republic has a new name. Formerly known as the Republic of the United States of Indonesia, it is now called the Republic of Indonesia.

An elaborate buffet served at the reception included several Indonesian dishes—the gado-gado, krupuk and nasi goreng. The gado-gado, a fresh salad of vegetables, is served with dressing made of crushed peanuts and hot sauce. The krupuk is a glorified potato chip, shrimp flake cooked in deep oil. And the nasi goreng goes down easiest of all, made of fried rice chicken, shrium, egg and small green onions.

Guests invited to the reception included several hundred diplomats, officials and members of residential society.

Singer Has Lunch at Senate

HILDEGARDE, the chanteuse, lunched yesterday at the Capitol. There were Senators in the gathering, but her visit was non-political. The hostess was Mrs. Claude Pepper, and the luncheon was held in the Senate dining room.

In addition to men from Capitol Hill, guests included Ambassador Joaquin Elizalde of the Philippines, Miss Doris Fleeson, the Secretary of the Senate and Mrs. Leslie Biffle, and Richard Skinner, manager of Olney Theatre, where Hildegarde is the current star.

Later in the afternoon Hildegarde was honor guest at a tea given at 4 p. m. by the American Newspaper Women's Club. Miss Sigrid Arne, president of the club, and Hildegarde received together.

Comdr. William H. Hudgins entertained yesterday at a cocktail party at Anderson House for Mrs. Gallia Fein-Fedorinchik Painter and Lieut. Col. Albert Lyman Cox, jr., who will be married Saturday at St. John's Episcopal Church.

Capt. L. J. J. Robins, Chief of Staff of the Belgian Navy and member of the Chiefs of Staff Committee of the North Atlantic regional planning group, was the guest in whose honor a stag cocktail party was given yesterday by the Belgian Military Attache, Maj. Count Yvan Du Monceau de Bergendal. The party was held between 5:30 and 7:30 o'clock at the Army-Navy Club.

The Ambassador of Italy entertained at a luncheon at the embassy on Wednesday for the Italian Minister of Foreign Trade, Ivan Matteo Lombardo. Sharing honors with the Minister was the Secretary of Commerce, Charles Sawyer.

Boston Couple Honored

MR. AND MRS. WALTER SUTTER of Boston, Mass., are at the Wardman Park for a visit of several weeks. Mrs. Sutter's sister, Mrs. Philip S. Jessup and Mr. Jessup gave a buffet supper party in their honor last night, and later, around Labor Day, they will give a cocktail party for the Sutters.

Both Mrs. Sutter and Mrs. Jessup are the daughters of the late Gen. Harrison Jackson Price. Hardin B. Price, their brother, will give a party for Mr. and Mrs. Sutter Saturday evening at the Army Navy Club.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

DEMAND for entertainment is falling off these days, but the hillbilly and Western music industry is doing a booming business. And Washington is out front in the new field.

The Capital has thousands of hillbilly fans. They support the hillbilly radio programs and the traveling shows, and at one time they managed to fill Constitution Hall once a week.

During the summer, the main event is a monthly cruise on the Potomac to Indianhead and back. Connie B. Gay's office provides hillbilly artists, and singing and dancing is the order of the evening.

Tonight's group—leaving at 8:45 on the S.S. Bear Mountain—features Little Jimmy Bickenn and His Country Boys. Little Jimmy's troupe is the youngest of the 200 artists Grand Ole Opry in Nashville keeps out on the road. As if 200 weren't enough, there is a large agency in Richmond and another in Baltimore, beside Connie B. Gay's here. Impromptu bookers set themselves up in country towns to supply local events; even Canada contributes hillbilly artists to the scene.

Connie B. Gay, the man behind most of the hillbilly activities in Washington, is indicative of the industry itself. Born at Lizard Lick, N. C., he became farm director of a radio station in Raleigh. Then he moved to Washington and the Agriculture Department. Here he conducted the National Farm and Home Hour.

When station WARL began operation in 1946, Connie conducted the program, "Town and Country Time." Then it was a half-hour program; now it runs an average of 4½ hours a day. But whereas in 1946 it was serious farm talk with an occasional song, it is now, due to listener response, a full-fledged hillbilly disc jockey program.

The cruise tonight is a typical affair in hillbilly circles. The atmosphere will be unpretentious and informal. Guests will be good-humored and energetic. Couples will mill about the three decks of the S.S. Bear Mountain. The first deck provides sandwiches, drinks and games. The third deck supplies fresh air and star gazing, is called the "spooners' deck."

Entertainment centers in the second deck, where Don Patton and His Swing Boys play for dancing all evening. Singer of the evening is a local discovery of Connie's. Prairie Sue, as she is called, has had big success in her first few engagements.

Halfway through the evening, Little Jimmy presents his country boys in songs and comedy situations. Jimmy is 4 feet 11 inches, but they call him 5 feet of dynamite. Flashily dressed, with a big booming voice, he's the sort of personality you have to see a second time — if only to make sure he really exists.

Trying to Shine Pewter Gets You Nowhere Since It's Supposed to Be Dull

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me how to polish pewter? Can you ever get a high sheen on it that will make it look more like silver?

Y. T., Bethesda, Md.

Pewter is a soft, lack-luster metal that is never highly polished. With pewter, dullness is a downright virtue! Soiled pewter accessories should be washed in hot soapsuds and rinsed in clear hot water until the last trace of soap has disappeared. Then they should be wiped thoroughly dry with a soft, dry cloth.

Light tarnish stains can be wiped off pewter with gold silver polish or a liquid designed for polishing pewter. Avoid abrasives, as they may mar the pewter surface. If a heavy tarnish develops, scrub the surface with the silver polish applied with a soft brush, followed immediately by a coating of thick, mild, soap lather. Use fingers to make lather of the polish and soap and work it into all corners and crevices of the surface. Then the pewter should be rinsed thoroughly in soft, hot water and wiped dry with soft, dry cloth.

To get a soft sheen, the pewter can be rubbed with a chamois or a flannel polishing cloth.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me how to go about painting some old canvas chairs in good condition? Should they be treated in any way first?

L. A. D., Silver Spring, Md.

Scrub the surface with stiff, dry brush first to remove dirt, dust, and the old finish from the canvas. Wipe thoroughly with a good household dry cleaning fluid until all grease and other stains are gone. Let dry.

Before painting, wet canvas with water so paint will flow on smoothly. Use straight even strokes to apply paint. Prick any bubbles as they appear. Let paint dry thoroughly between coats. Use as many coats as seem necessary to get a good, solid color. To set paint pigment, let furniture stand in direct sunlight for three days or more.

Mrs. A. S. W., jr., has sent us a clipping from the June "Woman's Day" about making rose-spice beads. Someone recently asked about these in a letter to the column.

Condensed, the method described goes like this: The petals were dropped into an old iron kettle. To each thick layer, the merest sprinkle of water and a drop or two of oil of cinnamon and oil of cloves was added. When the kettle was full, the petals were weighted with flatirons and the cover set in place.

Next morning, the petals were stirred, forced through the finest blade of the food chopper, and replaced in the kettle to "ripen." This process was repeated for two or three days until the petals were as black as the kettle itself and of the consistency of rather damp pie dough.

The beads were then made by rolling a bit of dough between the palms. They were strung on hatpins to dry two or three days, then made into necklaces by alternating with gold beads on strong thread. They had a lasting jet-black color and fragrance. Since they shrank as they dried, they were made about a quarter-size larger than wanted.

DEAR ANNE:

I have two small shaggy chenille rugs—a sort of rose color. Will it work to wash them in the electric washing machine?

A. T., Washington.

Yes, but don't overload the washer. Weigh rugs if possible, and be sure not to exceed the recommended load for your machine.

Shake and sweep the rugs before washing to remove excess dirt. Soak them in lukewarm water 10 to 15 minutes. Wash in warm water with rich suds. Run washer about five minutes. Drain water and wash again with fresh suds. Repeat until suds stay clean.

Rinse rugs at least three times, then run through wringer at light pressure (if your machine is of this type). Hang over two lines, in the shade or indoors, stretched flat. When completely dry, fluff well by shaking and brushing lightly.

Taking special care of the washer afterward is important, in order to remove lint which has accumulated in the drains.

DEAR ANNE:

How may I separate a drinking glass from a small glass bowl into which it slipped easily, but which has so far resisted all my efforts to separate it?

E. S. M., Washington.

Set the bowl in warm water and pour cold water into the glass. The glass bowl will expand, and the drinking glass contract so that you can easily separate the two.

PETUNIA!

Worry, worry, worry!
WHAT will make bananas
Get riper in a hurry?

Wrap 'em in several layers of soft cloth, Petunia, and put 'em in a dark unventilated drawer for a day or two. They'll turn gold and mellow deliciously.

Women in the Food Industry

Many a Star Is Born Right in the Kitchen

By Marie Gifford

Director, Consumer Service, Armour & Co.

BEHIND the food you buy and the recipes you use, you'll always find a woman! Marie Gifford tells why in this first in a series of articles on "Women in the Food Industry." She also gives you a look behind the scenes in her own test kitchens. For the past 16 years, Marie Gifford has been director of the consumer service department for Armour and Company in Chicago, Ill. In real life, she is Esther Latzke, graduate home economist from Kansas State College and former head of the Department of Home Economics Research of North Dakota State College. As director of the Marie Gifford kitchens, she heads a large staff which concerns itself with every angle of consumer interest in her company's products.

ALL stars are not born to shine upon the stage of a theater or movie screen. A lot of them in the food field take their bows before the wider audience of 40 million homemakers, who appraise them and applaud their success by making them a part of their regular food purchase.

To find out just what new foods are going to make stardom with the housewife is one of the food industry's biggest jobs, and it employs a sizable group of chemists, bacteriologist engineers, home economists, laboratory technicians, packaging experts, market research analysts. Would you have believed that all these technically trained men and women stood behind every one of the new foods you see on your grocer's shelves?

One of the most interesting steps in developing a new product is the actual kitchen testing done in our Marie Gifford kitchens. These kitchens are just like oversized home kitchens, with the latest in equipment, and a large staff of graduate home economists who know food standards and homemakers' methods. They are busy constantly checking on the quality standards of already established products, giving new products a thorough workout, devising new and economical ways to cook and serve all our meat products and taking the many color pictures of the handsome food dishes that come to you through advertising and in recipe books.

Requests Come From Housewives

A FEW years ago we began to get more and more requests from busy homemakers for meats that were really ready to serve in a jiffy. Ladies told us they either didn't have time, or didn't want to spend a couple of hours cooking a meal. As a result, our kitchens got busy perfecting an assortment of pantry shelf meats that are now taking on a starring role. Already cooked and canned hams from 1½ pounds to 10 pounds in weight, a delicious brown beef stew, a really meaty chop suey and a spaghetti and meat dish are just some of the new items.

Each of these had all the preliminary technical tests for manufacturing procedures and keeping qualities, and were tried out in the test kitchens many times to perfect flavor and general eating quality. Not until they had approval from all our experts were they ready for consumer appraisal.

Then they passed the critical approval of large consumer panels—homes scattered all over the nation, where they were served to the family and reactions reported. Sometimes samples were revised and retested many times until approval was unquestioned. We found, for instance, that the stew which met whole-hearted approval was a brown stew with good-sized pieces of meat, potato and carrot—no other vegetables.

Next our kitchens were asked to speak for the homemaker on the size of can which would be most acceptable, and finally to write the very important directions that go on every label. If you are not familiar with what the label tells, try reading it carefully next time you purchase.

Had to Write Directions

BUT our kitchen job was not over—for now we must help the inexperienced homemaker to find new and interesting ways to serve these new meats in easy and well balanced menus, take attractive pictures to make her actually see the stew.

Starting with a 16-ounce can of beef stew which can be just heated and served in 10 minutes, we made a wide variety of potato ruffled meat pies, biscuit-topped meat pies, stew with dumplings, or an entirely new stew with the addition of different vegetables. We found that we had added a new star to the line of convenience foods for which Mrs. America had been asking.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Looks Like a Sure-Fire Technique

"I'd like to buy a new set of golf clubs," I mentioned to a colleague the other day, "but I don't know what I'd do with the old ones."

"Start a rumor that there's a shortage of old, beat up golf sticks," he advised. "You'll be swamped with offers."

TURNABOUT

Police Reporter Al Lewis was checking a story at the Traffic Division the other day when a policeman on duty there asked:

"Hey, Al, what can we do with a pedestrian who is guilty in an accident case?"

Our Mr. Lewis asked him to come again on that one.

"Well," explained the cop, "when a motorist runs into a pedestrian we can take away his license to drive; but this is a case of a pedestrian barging into a car."

You may think it's funny to hear that people hurt themselves walking into stationary automobiles, but I can recall a very unfunny story about such an incident.

I had pulled out of a narrow alley off Cincinnati's Vine st. one day and was waiting for traffic on the main thoroughfare to pass.

"That cop strolling along the sidewalk picking his teeth seems to be in a daze," said my companion on the front seat. "He's going to walk right into your car."

And he sure did. He sprawled all over the hood and front fender, skinned his knee, howled with rage that I had almost killed him—and then gave me a ticket for "failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian."

NEAR MISS

Bill Plampin of 4108 Tunlaw ter. nw. works for the War Department. The other day he had a call for the records on a man named "Frazier," first name unknown.

Bill tried the Fraziers, Fazers, Frasers and a few other variations, without much success. Thirty minutes later, he got another call.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Have you noticed the great number of "parking vultures" who converge on restricted parking spaces about a half hour before legal parking is permitted, and then remain there all day?

The same cars are in the same spaces day after day. Their owners put them there with the specific intention of remaining all day. The whole purpose of limited parking is defeated.

Three areas I have observed are 15th st. between K and M sts. nw., 15th st. between Constitution ave. and E st. nw., and the vicinity of 18th and H sts. nw.

Do you have trouble finding a parking place? This, I think, is the answer to a large part of your problem.

Theodore L. Gray

Dear Ted:

You could have listed a dozen other areas, too. This sort of thing happens all over town.

It happens because we have more automobiles in the downtown area then we have parking spaces.

What's worse, even if parking facilities are expanded, the situation will not get much better. That's because thousands of people who'd like to take their cars to work now leave them at home because parking is such a headache downtown.

Provide more spaces and you'll attract more of those cars to the downtown area.

In short, you can't whip the situation until you're ready to shuck out a tremendous amount of money for a king-sized municipal parking project. And I don't see any sign that we're about to do that. Bill

OH, DOCTOR!

Mrs. C. B. B. of 5905 32d st. nw. forwards this story from her hometown paper down in Texas:

The local doctor was dog tired after a tough day. "If the phone rings during the night," he said to his wife, "you answer it, and say I'm out of town."

Sure enough, the phone rang at 2 a. m. The doctor's wife answered as instructed, but the shrill-voiced caller insisted on describing her symptoms anyhow.

In a hoarse whisper, the doctor prescribed the proper remedy, and his wife passed it along to the caller. The patient considered the advice momentarily and then said: "All right, I'll do as you suggest—on one condition."

"If you'll assure me that the man who is whispering to you is a member of the County Medical Society."

Brunswick, Md., Theater Man Is Found Dead

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—Jules Girden, 51, owner of the Imperial Theater in Brunswick, Md., was found dead yesterday in the Hotel New Yorker. Police said he apparently had taken an overdose of sleeping pills.

Police said he left a note saying he was despondent. He had registered Tuesday night as "Jay Gordan" and was the subject of a missing persons search Monday night. His home was in Long Island City.

Before becoming owner of the Brunswick Theater two and one-half years ago. Girden was with Warner Brothers. He leaves his wife, a son and a daughter.

Political Help Given to Hoodlums

By Jack Anderson and Fred Blumenthal

The most glaring weakness in our law-enforcement system is the way underworld hoodlums are able to thumb their noses at the authorities — with the help of political pals.

Morrison

For example, take the case of Silvestra Carolla, notorious New Orleans racketeer and big shot in the "black hand" underworld society. When Carolla was convicted on a narcotics rap in 1936, immigration authorities tried to deport him to his native Italy. However, they found themselves up against the old political runaround. Year after year, Congressman Jimmy Morrison of Louisiana introduced a succession of bills to keep Carolla in this country.

Though this held up Carolla's deportation for several years, he was finally kicked out and flew home to Italy in style. But he stayed only six months, and then was ordered back to Mexico by Lucky Luciano, former vice lord of New York City and international boss of the "black hand." The next thing immigration authorities knew, Carolla was operating out of Tijuana, Mex., and slipping over the border to New Orleans by plane. Once again the authorities nailed him—which puts them right back where they started.

Note—Another notorious racketeer whose deportation has been held up is Orlando Portale of Detroit. His political pull comes from Senator Homer Ferguson, Michigan Republican, who has introduced a bill to keep Portale in this country.

Youngsters in Korea

Worried mothers can't stop their 17-year-old sons who have enlisted in the National Guard from being shipped to Korea. Though the regular Army, Navy and Air Force won't take 17-year-olds without parental permission, no waiver is needed for them to join the National Guard . . . Missouri's elfish Senator Forrest Donnell has been beating the political drums about crime and corruption in Kansas City. Yet the Missourian, while Governor, granted a pardon to Charles Gargotta, the strong-arm racketeer who was murdered with political boss Charles Binaggio . . . Senator Lister Hill, Alabama Democrat, hasn't accepted a lecture fee since coming to the Senate, though some speakers' bureaus still advertise him

Nuernburg Records

The monumental job of publishing the Nuernburg war trial records will be completed by December. Tragic fact is the books won't be distributed in Germany, where they'd do the most good . . . Men who sell wire-tapping equipment estimate Washington has at least 12,000 electronic recorders capable of recording telephone conversations. Some firms give free wire-tapping lessons upon request . . . President Truman has told his staff he will veto the Mundt-Nixon bill, "if it costs me a million votes." Truman considers the controversial measure a dangerous threat to civil liberties . . . While Larry Norstad, the Air Force's No. 2 general, was visiting the Far East recently, he personally inspected the front lines in Korea to get the ground soldiers' view of Army-Air Force teamwork.

Medical Education Bill

The American Medical Association got a rough going-over when the deans of our top medical schools, headed by Dr. Joseph Hinsey of Cornell, met in Washington last week to do something about the critical doctor shortage.

They voted to write a strong letter to Stuart Symington, boss of the National Security Resources Board, urging passage of the medical education bill which the AMA lobby has been knifing in Congress.

In the letter, the medical deans advised Symington that Federal aid to medical schools was imperative to insure even the barest minimum of doctors for future civilian and military needs.

However, the stiffest wallop against AMA was delivered by one of its own topsiders, Dr. Herman Weiskotten, dean of the Syracuse University Medical School and chairman of the AMA's committee on medical education.

Weiskotten raised eyebrows at the secret meeting by admitting that he was "embarrassed" by AMA's attack on the medical aid measure, sponsored by Representative Andrew Biemiller of Wisconsin.

"The American Medical Association has made a terrible mistake by opposing this important legislation," he said.

Note—Both President Truman and Defense Secretary Louis Johnson have urged enactment of the Biemiller bill as a wartime must. At a recent meeting with members of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, Truman termed the measure "the most vital health legislation before Congree."
